Gov't Freeze Aids Protest

The provincial government's announcement that no salary increases are contemplated for public service employees has solidified support for labor's day of protest on Thursday, a union spokesman claims.

Leo Gray, business agent for the 2,400 unlicensed ferry workers, said Tuesday many people who were not behind the day of protest are now supporting it because of the announcement.

He said he would not comment further because he had not received details on the statement but is basing his estimate of increased support on telephone calls he has received from union members.

The executive of the Marine Services General (unlicensed) component of the B.C. Government Employees Union has come out in favor of its members staying off the job on Thursday.

This will, in effect, mean the ferries will not run even though ferry officers, the licensed crew members, have voted overwhelmingly in favor of staying on the job.

The government's position on salaries for public service employees was made in the second quarterly financial report released Monday night along with Premier Bennett's state of the province speech.

The report said any predicted surplus for the current fiscal year does not "contemplate any salary increases for government employees beyond those already contracted."

The BCGEU is involved in negotiations with the government for a new wage package and Gray said the subject of wages will come up at meetings of unlicensed ferry personnel on Thursday.

He said the meetings will take place at every terminal at 5 a.m. at which time labor's day of protest will be discussed along with other matters.

Gray said he expects the majority of the unlicensed members will stay off the job.

He said the members will put up information picket lines at all the terminals as well.

Gray said every effort will be made to keep the terminals safe and provisions will be made for emergency runs, for example, from Swartz Bay to the Gulf Islands, if necessary.

Richardson Quits Over Bilingualism

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson resigned from the federal cabinet today, citing policy differences over French-language rights in the constitution and the government's controversial bilingual program.

"I want to speak openly and frankly to Canadians about the constitution without the restraints imposed upon a member of the cabinet," Richardson wrote in a written statement announcing his resignation.

"I am opposed to placing additional French language rights in the Canadian constitution under a perpetual Quebec veto, at least until the government's bilingual program proves to be workable and more widely acceptable," Richardson said.

A few minutes after Richardson's announcement, Prime Minister Trudeau said he heartily disagreed with the minister's reason for resigning and called the action premature.

Emerging from a Liberal caucus meeting where the resignation was never even mentioned, the PM stated that Richardson's departure may crystallize the issue of French-English relations in Canada and force people to make up their minds on the future relationship between the two language groups.

Trudeau said he regrets losing his sole cabinet representative from Manitoba but noted that he resigned on a question of principle.

He said he argued with the minister for several days that his departure from the cabinet over the question of entrenchment of language rights in the constitution is premature because the provincial premiers have not made up their minds on the question

JET CRASHES INTO SCHOOL

LA PAZ (UPI) — A Boeing 707 U.S. cargo plane en route from Santa Cruz, Bolivia, to Miami crashed on take-off today and plowed into a school, killing an estimated 100 persons, including children playing soccer in the playground, Panamericana Radio reported from Santa Cruz.

Radio contact with Santa Cruz, a town of 50,000 located about 330 miles southeast of the capital, was filled with static and only sketchy reports could be made out.

RCMP Cars Bombed

MERRITT, (CP) — One RCMP car was destroyed and another damaged by an explosive thrown under them Tuesday. Apparently someone passing the cars threw a stick of dynamite about 1 a.m.

Indians Protest

QUESNEL (CP) — Members of the Nazko and Kluskus Indian Bands marched through the streets here Tuesday chanting that they don't want the white man's laws and will live their own ways in protest to the lack of response from the provincial government to their demands for input into proposed logging development.

Italy Shakes Again

UDINE (UPI) — A strong earth tremor shook the Friuli region of northeastern Italy early today, causing several buildings damaged by previous earthquakes to collapse, geologists said. No injuries were reported.

Terrorists Jailed

LONDON (AP) — Nine Northern Ireland terrorists responsible for placing bombs in English cities were given stiff sentences ranging from 10 to 15 years by British courts Tuesday.

Condominium Buyer Stuck in Black Hole

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mrs. Dorothy Caldwell will soon be living alone in what could best be described as the black hole of Esquimalt.

She is the only person who bought a condominium unit in a 20-suite building at 877 Ellery.

The other 19 units were rented. At least they were until tenants began complaining about the total lack of repairs. Now only six of the suites are occupied and the tenants indicate they will not stay long.

The departing tenants are adding to the mess.

Light bulbs have burned out leaving all three floors in darkness (although some of the bulbs were replaced in the past 24 hours when word got around that the building was being checked by the press).

A fire extinguisher was stolen two months ago and has not been replaced.

The third floor is deserted and unlivable in its present condition.

Suite 302 is a scene of indescribable filth. The tenants have left behind a pile of garbage on the floor and the rugs in the bedrooms are stained dark yellow and smell of urine. The suite is full of apple cores, empty liquor bottles and flies. Some or all of the garbage may have been left by vandals.

It is difficult to get into apartment 303 because of the pile of clothes left in the entranceway. Whoever lived there appears to have taken only about two-thirds of their possessions.

Each room contains some discarded items, including hockey sticks and a suitcase.

The lock on suite 305 is broken beyond repair. Someone has taken a crowbar to the door of 306, shattering the door frame.

The building's roof leaks and its walls are cracked. The rug in the hall is soaking wet.

Mrs. Caldwell paid $40,500 for her suite on May 20, 1975. The building has not been attended to since that time, she said.

For a while she was not too concerned, but then the front door system broke down and vandals began attacking the place.

"I have been phoning everyone connected with the building, trying to get some help," she said.

"People keep passing the buck. I don't know what to do."

The problem is that the owner, Mid-Island Development Ltd., has been unable to meet the first and second mortgage payments and court action is under way.

This litigation has delayed a change in ownership. Once the title passes to new owners, action will be taken to clean up the mess.

However, a court-appointed receiver said Mrs. Caldwell will get some help within 24 hours now that he is aware of the problem.

He said the holder of the first mortgage, Morguard Trust Co., will have someone inspect the property immediately and determine what repairs are necessary.

No action on the long-term problem of major repairs to the building can be undertaken, however, until the title changes hands.

The court action started in April and might take another six months before it is completed.

Until then, Mrs. Caldwell will still have a problem. But at least the building will be cleaner, starting this week.

Walkout Illegal In Ont.

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Domglas Ltd. of Mississauga, Ont., says the Ontario Labor Relations Board has ruled illegal a walkout planned by 2,000 employees for Thursday's national day of protest against federal wage and price controls.

Gordon Shamanski, director of personnel an industrial relations, said today he received a phone call from another company official, who told him that the board had issued a "strong declaration" that a walkout by workers at Domglas's three Ontario plants would constitute an illegal work stoppage.

Shamanski said he has not seen the board's ruling and did not know whether the board had given reasons for its decision. The board has not made public its decision but has issued it to both parties.

The company was seeking to have the protest declared strike in violation of collective agreements with five locals of the United Glass and Ceramic Workers of North America at Domglas plants in Wallaceburg, Brampton and Hamilton.

The union had argued that neither the company nor the board has a right to infringe on workers' rights to express political views.

S. Africa Riot Police Quell Rampaging Youths

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Riot police patrolled three black townships outside Cape Town today after rioting Tuesday in which police killed a black youth, blacks burned six cars and 10 persons were arrested.

Some stone throwing was reported during the night in the Langa, Guguletu and Nyanga black townships, but there was no report of any violence today.

Black youths on Monday ransacked more than 100 illegal liquor stores in the three townships and destroyed their stocks. The youths contend that drinking by their elders is a sign of decadence and submission to rule by the white minority.

Tuesday, the youths attacked more shebeens and then about 500 started toward Athlone, a township nearby for coloreds (mixed race). The police broke up the march with tear gas and baton charges. They said one youth was shot to death when he tried to throw a gasoline bomb.

Meanwhile, a powerful black Rhodesian nationalist group has attacked Britain for its insistence that the Geneva conference to set up an interim multiracial Rhodesian government open Oct. 25. (See in depth story on Page 24.)

700 Road Jobs In $40M Plan

About 700 jobs will be created this winter through the $40 million highways program announced Monday by Premier Bill Bennett.

The total program announced by Bennett will see $120 million worth of highway construction, creating about 2,000 jobs.

But only $40 million will be spent this fiscal year ending March 31, 1977 which should provide about 700 jobs.

Bennett originally refused to say how much of the $120 million would be spent this year or how many jobs would be created.

After repeated questioning Tuesday on the job creation scheme, the premier would only say there would be more jobs than there would have been if the program hadn't been created.

But a highways department report released later in the day sets out a rough outline of the projects.

The report says it is difficult to judge exactly how many jobs will be created, but a major contract usually requires 40 to 50 workers.

There are 41 major contracts in the total $120 million program which should provide between 1,600 and 2,000 jobs. With only a third of the money being spent this year, the program should create about 700 jobs.

An undetermined number of short-term day-labor jobs will also be available.

A total of $30.8 million will be spent for highway construction projects on Vancouver Island, including construction of the North Island Highway and widening of the Trans Canada highway. Of that $30.8 million, $6.5 million will be spent this fiscal year.

A fund of $12.5 million has been authorized for temporary day-labor work on 150 projects throughout the province, all of which will be spent this year.

Meanwhile Tory leader Scott Wallace has charged the premier misled B.C. residents in his announcement of the highways program. He said Bennett appeared to promise $120 million for extra highways work this winter which is not the case.

Syrians Launch Attacks

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Ignoring a tentative cease-fire agreement announced Monday night, the Syrian army Tuesday unleashed a two-pronged attack in south Lebanon using artillery, tanks and infantry.

The Syrians began attacks west toward the port of Sidon, Lebanon's third largest city, and south toward the strategically-located town of Nabatie.

The offensive by an estimated 1,500 Syrian soldiers by late afternoon reportedly had captured Roum, a town that since June had been held by Palestinian and Lebanese leftist forces.

The attack on Sidon, the leftists' last major source of arms, was seen as a new attempt to pressure the Palestinians to accept a settlement sharply restricting their power in a post-war Lebanon.

Two weeks ago, a combined Christian-Syrian offensive pushed the guerrillas out of several key towns in Lebanon's central mountains.

U.S. Clears Vicious Arms for Israel

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Concussion bombs which have devastating effect over a wide area and secret heat-sensitive equipment for spotting targets at night are the major new items President Ford has agreed to provide to Israel.

This was learned Tuesday as several officials in the Pentagon and state department expressed concern that the bombs and scanning device would destabilize the military balance in the Middle East, giving Israel an important new advantage.

The bomb Israel will now be allowed to have is called a "fuel-air explosive." At a preset height above the ground, a film of kerosene-like inflammable is squirted out to form a circle as much as 30 feet in diameter.

This circle is then detonated, making a concussion that crushes bodies. If the concussion is not fatal, people in the area are then torn apart by the rush of air (including that in their lungs) to fill the empty space momentarily created by the explosion. A firestorm follows.

"We think of this not as a weapon but as a kill mechanism," the narrator of a film made by the military says in describing the bomb.

The targets of the fuel-air explosive are people in trucks, foxholes and bunkers hidden beneath heavy tree canopies and therefore not reachable, efficiently, with other anti-personnel weapons, the film's narrator says.

"It does interesting things to mechanical parts and people. The blast builds up pressures ... We tested it on sheep placed in foxholes and found their innards burst," the film, which was made in 1972, says.

There aren't any jungles in the Mideast, but the fuel-aid explosive could be used to detonate an enemy minefield, making a safe path through the mines as well as against equipment and personnel.

Objects show up on a screen, defined by the heat they are giving off which is picked up by the camera. NATO does not yet have FLIR, which was initially developed for use in aircraft but now can be used by ground troops as well.

The numbers of these new weapons that Israel will be allowed to get could not be determined. The total cost of the new items is between $100 million and $150 million.

The fuel-air explosive is one of a family of bombs called cluster bomb units (CBUs). In the past, Israel has been allowed to purchase some less powerful CBUs, but only with the restriction that the weapons not be used against civilian populations.

and because it has yet to be discussed in cabinet and caucus.

Trudeau said he has attempted since the Victoria conference in the constitution five years ago to have language rights entrenched in the British North America Act, as it is now called, but has stated since then that he is waiting for a report from the provinces on their feelings about the matter.

"Until we get that report I feel resignation is premature," he declared.

The prime minister also stressed that entrenchment of language rights in the consitution applied as much to English as to French and that English-speaking Quebecers would be happy to see their language rights protected in this way.

The prime minister insisted that he is not committed to any one formula or veto system for further constitutional change once patriation is accomplished.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson will act as minister of national defence until a new minister is appointed, he said.

Senator Ray Perrault, from B.C., government house leader in the Senate, also criticized Richardson's departure at this time.

As Richardson began to speak, Mackasey called "Jim" in a loud stage whisper and made negative signs with his hands. But Richardson continued reading his prepared text.

He said "cabinet can do without Bryce Mackasey, but not without James Richardson, because he brought an important view from the west.".

Mackasey said that although he did not agree with Richardson's views on bilingualism, he had been the defence minister's "best friend in cabinet."

"Even if I don't agree with him, I hope he does not leave the impression of being a racist or a bigot, because he's not," Mackasey said.

Searchers Scour Lillooet for Plane

Two Buffaloes and a T-31 jet aircraft from CFB Comox were searching the rocky region of Lillooet today for an aircraft reported missing on a flight from Kamloops to Pemberton Tuesday.

The missing Cessna 182 was last reported at 5:30 p.m. when it refuelled at Kamloops.

Ontario Labor Board Says Walkout Illegal

Union officials could not be reached for comment on the ruling.

Meanwhile, Paul Weiler, chairman of the B.C. Labor Relations Board was expected to make a statement later today on B.C. Hydro's application to ban a walkout of its 10,000 employees on Thursday.

Weiler is expected to rule on whether a work stoppage would violate provisions of the B.C. Labor Code or collective agreements between Hydro and its employees

In other developments, Fort St. John city council voted unanimously Tuesday not to allow the Peace River and District Labor Council to hold a parade on Thursday.

A resolution denying permission for a parade was presenetd by Ald. John Howe. The resolution called the protest a political demonstration.

Len Dorval, president of the labor council, said the council's action is discrimination. He said the aldermen are not representing the organized workers in the community.

However, council's position probably won't have too much effect on Thursday. Dorval says it isn't illegal to walk or drive down the streets.

"We're not parading. We're driving slowly on Thursday."

In Ottawa it was announced that Ed Broadbent, federal NDP leader, will march in a picket line outside federal government buildings here as part of the one-day protest.

A party spokesman said Broadbent will speak at a rally at the United Auto Workers hall.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press earlier this month indicated unions with memberships totalling more than one million had committed themselves to participation.

Generally across the country, it appears that essential services, such as those provided by police, firefighters and hospitals, will be maintained during the protest Thursday.

However, postal service likely will be disrupted.

Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said officials of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada told him the union's members will join the protest.

Thousands of workers in the construction, steel and auto industries have said they will be off the job.

Although railway workers said they would support the protest, the president of Air Canada said Tuesday he anticipates business as usual for the airline's employees.

A spokesman for president Claude Taylor said none of Air Canada's four unions—representing pilots, flight attendants, ground crew and ticket agents—has informed the company about joining the protest.

In a number of communities, transit workers have decided to work, saying persons joining the protest will need transporation.

The labor congress has said there will be parades in more than 100 centres across the country and that the 30 members of the executive committee are to speak in major centres.

BOY BACK TO BELKNAP

NANAIMO (CP) — A 13-year-old juvenile was remanded Tuesday to the care of Victor Belknap, superintendent of child welfare for British Columbia, when he appeared before Judge Stan Wardill of family court.

The judge agreed with a request with the court lawyer that the youth should be returned to a group home in Victoria until a foster home can be found for him.

A month ago Judge Wardill fined Belknap $300 and held him responsible for the youth's actions in a series of break-ins because the boy was a ward of the province.

Last week the boy left a group home in Victoria. He was picked up in Nanaimo the next day and charged with breaking and entering.

Arms for Israelis

House, state department and Pentagon were under orders not to discuss the decision to let Israel have these sophisticated items that had until now been denied it.

Informed sources in the government said, however, that the decision has made Friday in the White House without the usual discussion and examination within the executive branch.

One source said the decision was "taken in a vacuum as a last attempt to do something after the debate."

Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter charged during their Wednesday foreign policy debate that Ford was not giving enough support to Israel.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger both denied Monday that presidential politics had anything to do with the release of the arms to Israel.

Perfectly Safe At $3M Each!

WASHINGTON (AP) — The transportation department has unveiled two new cars which protect their occupants from serious injury even when they smash into a barrier at 50 miles an hour.

There's only two drawbacks — they cost more than $3 million each and there's no trade-ins on the department's current autos. The cars were built for the department to demonstrate how cars could be made safer. They will be tested for ideas that the department can use in new auto safety standards.

One car, built by Calspan Corp. of Buffalo, N.Y., for $3.1 million, is a redone version of the Chrysler-built Simca. It has a soft front end to protect pedestrians, a "passive inflatable front seatbelt occupant restraint system," and an engine mounted sideways to prevent it from penetrating the passenger compartment.

The second car was built by Minicars, Inc. of Goleta, Calif., for $3.3 million.

It features a computerized radar set that measures the distance between cars, warns the driver when he closes too quickly on other cars and applies the brakes when a collision is imminent.

FIRE SAFETY COURSE AIDED

The Oak Bay fire department will be presented with a film projector and a public address system at a Kiwanis Club dinner Thursday at Kiwanis Manor on Milton street.

Fire Chief Fred Leeke will receive the gift from Oak Bay Alderman Norm Pimlott, chairman of the fire committee.

The Oak Bay department has embarked on a public education course of fire prevention and first aid, and will use the new equipment in taking the program to the people, Leeke said.

Young Vows Action Against 'Rowdies'

A group of James Bay residents protesting what they call rowdy and offensive conduct by patrons of the James Bay Inn, 270 Government was assured by Mayor Mike Young Tuesday that the city will take action to curb the nuisance.

When the delegation appeared before city council in caucus, armed with a 147-name petition and detailed brief and accompanied by legal counsel, the mayor gave a commitment that police patrols of the area will be a "priority" in the weeks ahead while the problem is assessed.

He also said council will arrange a meeting with Vic Woodland, general manager of the provincial Liquor Administration Branch, to discuss what licence restrictions can be imposed; and the city will consider the petitioners' suggestion for a resident-only parking restriction during the hours the cabaret is in operation.

The concerned residents complained in the brief that previous approaches to the city administration and the LAB produced only "inconclusive" discussion and little action, while complaints to the inn's management had met with "either indifference or antagonism."

A questionnaire circulated in the neighborhood showed that the majority of complaints concerned damage to private property, excessive noise by patrons and cabaret performers, inadequate parking and "high-speed traffic, largely drunken, exacerbated by the regular twice-monthly false fire alarm."

Among the specific complaints were instances of drunks "vomiting and urinating" on lawns, rocks hurled through windows, damage to fences, trees and other property and obscene language.

Bill Wellburn, manager of the James Bay Inn, said today he considers the area residents' complaints "a little bit exaggerated," and claimed that neighbors have a tendency to blame the establishment for everything that happens in the vicinity.

"Government Street at 1 a.m. on a Saturday is a busy place," he said. "If a car goes racing by everyone automatically assumes we're to blame."

As far as city police are concerned "there isn't really a problem" involving the cabaret, he said, and the police department seems to take the view that complaints are to be expected wherever such an establishment is located in a neighborhood.

Wellburn noted that his is one of the few cabarets in the city open only on weekends, and the only one to close at 1 a.m. The others are still operating until 2 a.m.

He said a special policeman has been hired at the inn's expense to patrol the street area near the premises and ensure there is no damage to private property.

An accompanying letter from the Rape Relief Centre said the organization has documented reports of assaults on women which occurred between 11 p.m. and 4 a.m. in the last six months, within a three-block radius of the James Bay Inn.

A spokesman for the delegation, Terry Morley of 613 Avalon, told council: "This is an angry neighborhood that wants some action," because most residents are finding it almost impossible to carry on living there.

Unless the action is forthcoming, he warned, many more residents will join those who have already moved out and the area will become one of urban decay.

3 Eco Groups Merge For Pipeline Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five B.C. environmental groups have formed a common front to protest a proposed oil pipeline to Edmonton from Kitimat.

The Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society, Sierra Club, Island Protection Association, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the B.C. Federation of Naturalists also have the support of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers union in protesting the 750-mile pipeline.

The pipeline, proposed by a consortium of 10 companies headed by Trans-Mountain Pipe Line of Vancouver, would carry up to 750,000 barrels of crude oil a day from Kitimat to Edmonton and then on an existing line to refineries in the U.S. midwest.

The environmental groups say the Kitimat pipeline is a United States project that guarantees ecological disaster for B.C.'s coast.

SPEC spokesman Gary Gallon said the huge tankers which would transport the oil to Kitimat aren't built for the rough weather and treacherous navigational problems in the area.

"B.C. has always had a pristine coastline but if this goes ahead there is a real threat that it will have a blackened coastline which will be destroyed ecologically."

Environmentalists suggest that all oil from Alaska and other producers be taken to a terminal which could be built west of Port Angeles, Wash., and piped from there to the Midwest as well as for use on the U.S. west coast.

The environmentalists reject the Kitimat route because it would affect four native Indian land claims; little public input has been involved in the project; it will provide few permanent jobs for British Columbians, and the social impact of such projects include importing inflation, crime and a strain on local community services.

Gallon said the groups will seek meetings with provincial, federal and Washington State officials as well as hold public meetings in the Kitimat area.

He also said the National Energy board, which will begin hearings on the Trans-Mountain proposal next month, is appointed from the business community and is not the proper body to hold the hearings.

Pretoria Turns Off Gas Tap

PRETORIA (AP) — In a move to conserve gasoline, the South African government today limited the hours when gas may be sold, prohibited storage of more than a gallon of gas at home and barred people from siphoning gas if they run out of fuel.

The measures were designed to reduce South Africa's balance of payments deficit which is running at about $2.25 billion a year, $1.3 billion of which is for fuel, Economics Minister J. C. Heunis told a news conference.

Heunis estimated the new measures would save the country between $70 million and $92 million a year and that he expected them to be permanent. "It will have to be accepted that petrol conservation measures in one or another form, are a permanent feature of life in South Africa," he said.

A gallon of regular gas costs about $1.34, compared to 55 to 60 cents in the United States. Private motorists consume about 47 per cent of the country's fuel.

POLICE ARREST SEWER SUSPECT

PARIS (UPI) — The owner of a small Paris garage was arrested today in the case of the multimillion-dollar 'sewer burglary" at the Societe Generale bank in Paris.

Raymond Briascier, 40, is the first person to be arrested in the case that became known as the bank robbery of the decade after thieves burrowed through sewers and escaped with cash, jewels and securities worth millions of dollars from the Societe Generale's branch in Nice last July.

The technique was repeated Aug. 15 when thieves used the sewers in a similar raid at the Ile Saint-Louis branch of the same bank in Paris.

In both robberies, the burglars entered the banks by the gutter after digging long tunnels enabling them to reach the bank's safe deposit vault. The robbers both times acted during the weekend, carefully breaking in and emptying all the safe deposit boxes.

ANTI-VIOLENCE CLAUSE READY

A clause giving city council the right to cancel its contract with the Victoria Cougars hockey club if violent conduct is permitted at Memorial Arena games was approved by aldermen at council's informal caucus session Tuesday.

The motion will have to be ratified at the full council meeting on Thurday.

If the clause is approved for insertion in the 1976-77 contract with the club, and any violence ensures during the season, the club could find itself evicted if council considered it had not taken "all precautions reasonably necessary to curb" such behavior.

The contract language spells out that council's decision "shall be final."

Said Mayor Mike Young: "If they don't want to play in our pond they can play in someone else's pond — it's as simple as that."

The mayor said emphatically that council is well equipped to "stand in judgment impartially and reasonably" if and when incidents of violence occur and a breach of contract is questioned.

Council rejected a section of the draft clause prepared by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers, in which violence was defined as "hitting, kicking, striking, stabbing, biting or jumping on another person."

Would body-checking constitute "hitting?" In considering such questions and jokingly suggesting other mayhem words for inclusion, aldermen felt the whole matter of definition was too thorny to tackle.

"It would make us a laughing stock," said Young.

Courting The Old Girl

For a government that is in deep trouble with the electorate the Trudeau administration did not propose any bold initiatives in Tuesday's speech from the throne. Many observers had predicted a daring document designed to capture the imagination of a jaded public and increase lagging Liberal support. Instead it was as vague as any other throne speech, hinting and feinting at things to come, but maintaining the general thrust of government policy this past two years.

Given the caution and resistence to change among the general public in recent months, perhaps this is the safest political course for a bruised administration. Inflation and unemployment, the two major bogies of this decade, will continue to dominate the government's attention. Few Canadians would argue these are misplaced priorities. But the manner in which the Trudeau administration deals with them will remain controversial. Labor, for example, has made a direct militant bid for shared power in the national economic establishment. While Labor Minister John Munro has refused labor's demands, the throne speech contains some condiments obviously constructed to mollify organized labor.

The government will encourage greater participation by workers in managerial decisions affecting worker conditions. A national institution dedicated to improving the quality of life in the workplace will be founded. Labor education programs will be expanded and a voluntary code of fair employment practices will be put together. It is significant that while the Trudeau administration nods in labor's direction, there is no indication of capitulation to the Canadian Labor Congress' demands.

Business too, reaped rewards from a defensive government. Increased industrial assistance programs to help Canadian industry compete abroad — a deep bow to Canada's deteriorating balance of payments. Simpler governmental regulations and easier access to local financial assistance. Even the often watered down Competitions Act — in the mill this past five years — promises to be pussycat legislation. Already the new minister of consumer and corporate affairs, Tony Abbott, has said the government won't interfere much with mergers.

Emphasis on bilingualism has been changed from its previous focus on Ottawa civil servants to educating the masses of Canadian school children, assuming provincial co-operation.

This is an enlightened approach that may solve Canada's historic racism in two generations. A long haul, but a worthy one. If the country is to survive its endemic English-French crisis it shall be on the basis of two languages and two cultures.

Job creation in areas of chronic unemployment and unemployment insurance funds diverted to job-training schemes, indicates a concern with Canada's rising jobless total. In fact, the government is concerned about everybody and everything in this budget. If anybody loses it is the provinces. Unfair freight rates, predominantly in western Canada, will be corrected, the government claims for the umpteenth time. But as to the expensive matters of negotiated decreases in federal aid to medicare, university education, and hospital insurance the government is adamant. The provinces will have to do more on their own financial hooks.

Conspicuous by their absence were any mention of a guaranteed national income plan, gun control legislation or a program to encourage industry-wide bargaining. It is almost as if the government has made a conscious decision to avoid the imaginative and controversial in favor of the bland and safe. Political considerations take precedence over bold government.

The speech concluded with a carefully worded section outlining the government's role in the economy after controls are removed. Apparently the Trudeau administration plans to follow the middle road, neither to the left with massive government intervention. nor to the right with an absolutely free market system. Essentially, this description is meaningless and gives little indication of Ottawa's intentions. Perhaps the most uneasy aspect of the government's outline is the ease with which the government slides to the right. While it is understandable that an unpopular government should listen to the electorate's wishes, Canadians still want a strong secure administration. This regime illustrates vacillating weakness in the speech from the throne. It is reacting as opposed to leading.

In sum, a defensive budget bowing in all directions. The Liberal administration of Pierre Trudeau is cringing and attempting to placate its critics in one fell swoop. The politics of this throne speech are blatant to a fault. Still, it is indicative of how democracy should operate. The government is listening to the people again. But the flirtation has been so fickle in the past it remains to be seen whether this Liberal suitor can con the old Canadian girl at the polls.

"Now that's what I call a land commissioner . . ."

Canada's Arab Dilemma

The government may, as it professes, have no worries about its political enemies but it would do well, occasionally, to worry about its political friends; especially if they happen to be effective critics.

Consider, for example, the disturbing case of Herb Gray who keeps rattling cabinet windows with speeches as moderate in tone as they are telling in argument.

The latest, in Montreal, has to do with Canadian policy in the face of the Arab boycott of Israel, which has a direct impact on firms in this country. It is designed not only to deny trade to companies which deal with Israeli customers but also to deter them from dealing with other businesses which happen to have Jewish directors, managers, shareholders or even employees.

Mr. Gray's criticism is simple. For at least a year and a half, the government has been officially opposed to this outrageous policy. But the government's creature, the Export Development Corporation, has blandly ignored ministerial declarations and has in effect connived in the boycott without being called to account for its actions.

The case is well documented, as it should be. On May 8, 1975 the Prime Minister prodded by Mr. Gray condemned "this type of practice" as "alien to everything the government stands for" and to Canadian ethics generally. He expressed the hope that a specific directive would be unnecessary.

Ethics Admirable

Given the normal behaviour of bureaucratic empires, Mr. Trudeau's optimism was somewhat surprising. EDC, which had been insuring contracts requiring Canadian firms to comply with the boycott, let it be known that it would not consider itself bound in the absence of a formal cabinet directive.

Some weeks later, Alastair Gillespie announced that the government would not be issuing any directive until it had considered the matter and formulated its view.

While ethics are admirable, it might be undignified to abandon the alien with unseemly haste. In September 1975 Don Jamieson succeeded Mr. Gillespie. By November, he was assuring Mr. Gray that the matter would be up for consideration in two or three weeks. Four months later, he was involved in the preparation of a document which he hoped to present in three weeks. On September 27, the same Mr. Jamieson, now foreign minister, said that the boycott measures were repugnant and totally unacceptable. He promised a new Canadian policy "shortly."

Mr. Gray remains sceptical; unpersuaded that the government's capacity to endure the repugnant is as yet exhausted. His doubts are rooted, not only in the government's dilatory ways but also in a series of developments which he listed in the Montreal speech.

Mr. Jamieson's latest comments coincided with an announcement that the EDC will continue to provide insurance covering contracts with boycott clauses, subject to one reservation. If an Arab purchaser denied payment on the ground that the vendor failed to live up to the boycott clause, the insurance will be void. Mr. Gray makes the reasonable criticism that a firm, under such notice, will do everything possible to comply with the alien, the unethical and repugnant.

Mr. Jamieson, while still at trade and commerce, asked and obtained from

HERB GRAY
. . . friendly criticism

Parliament authority for the department to insure certain types of bank letters of credit to Middle Eastern countries. When pressed last March by Mr. Gray for an assurance that the authority would not be used to insure letters of credit dependent for payment on compliance with boycott provisions, the minister was unable to give such an undertaking.

Meanwhile the department, as zealous as the publicity conscious EDC, continues to tantalize Canadian firms with information about trade opportunies — open, unfortunately, only to companies willing to abide by the boycott rules.

There was also an interesting memorandum to cabinet which came into the possession of The Globe and Mail last August. Its authenticity has not been denied. The argument was that the effects of the boycott on Canadian companies had been exaggerated by pro-Israel lobbyists. It also contained the rather remarkable observation that "the boycott does not appear to discriminate against the Jewish race or religion." The writer Mr. Gray darkly suspects that he was a minister warns the cabinet that meaningful action to prevent Canadian firms from complying with the boycott would be harmful to our trade and might risk access to Arab oil.

For what purpose would anyone press such evidence on cabinet? Not surely in the hope that it would include the government to give substance to its professed policy.

Mr. Gray wonders if the answer to the puzzle is not a sentence in the memorandum noting, according to the Globe report, that "Arabs have diverted banking business and contacts to Canadian companies" since the U.S. government began to take more active steps to prevent American firms from complying with boycott provisions.

Was there a feeling that the alien, repugnant or otherwise, held out the prospect of some windfall profits?

In Mr. Gray's view, Canadian officials have been over-impressed by threats of Arab retaliation. There is evidence, he suggests, that the Arabs will not deny themselves goods of the right quality and price in support of a boycott which they have ways of evading when it suits their interests.

Arab Threats

The Americans, much more dependent on oil imports than we are, have been less impressed, as appears from the very strong bills passed by both Houses, forbidding any form of compliance with the boycott by U.S. firms.

Obviously, the boycott is a form of economic warfare directed against a state which the government periodically supports in eloquent declarations. Mr. Gray is troubled by this discordance. He also wonders whether, in the context of the boycott, the terms of the 1976 agreement with the Saudis can be reconciled with the Canadian Bill of Rights.

It may well be that the particular issue raised by Mr. Gray is of interest only to a minority of Canadians. That is true of many issues. But surely there is an underlying question which should be of interest to everybody. In this, or any other matter, is it right or tolerable that the government should have one policy for public consumption and another which applies in practice?

Unless the ministers can offer some persuasive answers — for which Mr. Gray has been waiting rather a long time — it will be fair to conclude that this is the reality in the Arab boycott case.

Election Spending

I note that the Socreds spent more on the recent provincial election than all the other three parties put together. A sum reported of over $900,000.

It is evident that this large sum did not emanate from the pockets of the party subscriber or the ordinary Joe.

Royalties were abolished and so the mining companies have been reimbursed for their generous contributions. The insurance companies are back with us and so they will collect their payments. The Land Commission has been stripped of non-Socred members and packed with Socreds so we can expect favourable decisions for our developers and so they will be repaid for their generous support. No action has been taken by this government to develop the near-bank which the former NDP government had on the drawing-board and so the banks and other financial institutions will be protected and thereby receive their payment for generous support. The list is long and who takes the punishment except the ordinary Joe. However the government was voted in by a free vote and so the apathetic and ill-informed voter must take the blame. M. P. B. Wrixon, 1701 Cedar HillCross-roads.

Majority Support

On CBC "Cross-Canada Check-Up" yesterday, labor's Day of Protest had majority support by callers from every province.

The last caller, a dynamic voice who said he was from the land of "the blue-eyed Arabs", reminded us that withholding services by labor is quite as acceptable as when done by corporations such as T. Eaton's dropping mail order service; stopping unprofitable sales outlets by other major companies; discontinuing railroad service; leaving Canada when international corporations find better opportunities elsewhere. In all these cases, the financial critics praise their exceptional business acumen. — N. Derrison, Victoria.

Building Crisis

I have been engaged in writing letters begging my friends for help to finance the "Piano-Fund" of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra — a more time-consuming job than I anticipated — but I feel impelled to take time out to write to you about the sudden and distressing building crisis facing the Department of Music, University of Victoria. The quality of work done by its faculty is highly regarded by musicians across Canada. Instrumental groups of the calibre of the Pacific Winds and Western Brass not only bring pleasure and inspiration to audiences on Vancouver Island, but both groups add enormously to Canada's growing musical reputation. The presence of the internationally acclaimed violist, Gerald Stanick, and the gifted viola students who flock to him from all over Canada and abroad, deserves much more gratitude and attention than can be given in this letter. May I say that a university does not gain lasting prestige merely by attracting a great and distinguished faculty, but by its ability to hang on to it. I have only mentioned the performing members of the department — who all work under unbelievably difficult and cramped conditions — but there are also distinguished composers, musicologists, and theory teachers valiantly and patiently waiting for decent facilities, long ago promised and now suddenly postponed. One part-time member meets his students in the corridors after each class to discuss serious matters as there is no office space available!

What seems to me to be a typical Canadian madness is the undue emphasis placed on aggressive hockey with its body-checks, brawls, and winning no matter what the price. And somewhat related to this subject of wrong emphasis, what a pity B.C. Labor's two-hundred-thousand members don't donate a day's pay (rather than strike) toward the new wing of the Music Building for the everlasting benefit of their own children. I daresay there would be enough left over to begin building a Centre For The Arts to house our Symphony, Conservatory of Music, and Theatre, which this beautiful city so badly needs. Perhaps with a little scrimping there might even be some left over for my Symphony "Piano-Fund". In any case, the real emphasis, it seems to me, should be directed toward teaching our youth the values of life which bring lasting spiritual happiness; kindness and thoughtfulness; and the skills with which to enchant our fellow men, and not place so much emphasis on winning over an opponent, or worse still, banking so heavily on that ephemeral panacea "fiscal responsibility" we hear so much about. Let us stop being so frightfully responsible for all the wrong reasons, and, the late hour notwithstanding, let us get on with the job of building the new wing for our Music Department at the University of Victoria. — Murray Adaskin, Professor Emeritus of Music, 3020 Devon Road.

Census Problems

I am writing this in the belief that the problems I have encountered in dealing with representatives of our federal government should be publicized, both in the hope of receiving some help in my personal battle and to educate others who may at some time consider accepting employment as I did with the federal government.

I acted as an enumerator in the 1976 census, enumerating four areas, one of which was rather large, the three others being small. The enumeration was completed by the deadline in June, my work passed quality control on the second of July, and was then sent to the regional census office in Vancouver for processing and the disbursing of my pay. In mid-August, not having heard any word from that office regarding the money owed me and knowing that most of my fellow workers had been paid, I wrote a letter to the director of the regional office asking that my cheque be prepared and sent, as I felt that the delay was unreasonable. On Aug. 20 I received a phone call from a gentleman in that office (significantly not a letter) who said that he had my cheque before him and would mail it that day. He blamed the delay on inexperienced office staff.

When on Sept. 9 I still had not received the promised money, my husband phoned the issuing office—department of supplies and services. As a result of this call I was contacted by one Sandra Wilson who said that the cheque had in fact been issued on July 30. She could not explain the phone call I had received in August or the fact that no action had been taken at that time. There was no apparent reason why the cheque should have been returned to the regional office before mailing. There was not a copy of my letter on file, nor any record of repeated phone calls made by my immediate supervisor on my behalf.

Ms. Wilson did say, however, that I would now have to wait until the missing cheque was found, either having been cashed or located by a post office trace, before I could be paid. I received no claim forms or other acknowledgment of the loss.

On Sept. 12 I again wrote to the regional census office, recounting this chain of events and asking that the missing cheque be immediately re-issued. I also asked for interest on the outstanding amount, since the delay in acting on the loss was the fault not of myself but of the office which failed to act responsibly on my first letter or on my commissioner's phone calls. Further, I asked for an explanation of the way in which the entire affair had been conducted.

When another 2½ weeks of silence followed I called the labor relations board to enlist their aid. I was told that as my employer had been the federal government I would have to go to the federal department of labor for assistance. A telephone call to these people resulted in the information that they could do nothing that I had not already done. And, of course, one cannot sue the government without that government's permission.

I have always believed that there were adequate laws protecting the rights of workers in this country. I and many others who worked for the census were wrong about that, it seems. There are, to the best of my knowledge, approximately one dozen of these cheques outstanding in B.C. How many are there in the rest of Canada? And what can be done about this situation, for us now and for future workers who will certainly find themselves in the same position if nothing is done?—Jean E. Hamilton, Cobble Hill.

Arts Coverage

The Arts Column in The Times written by Audrey Johnston is very well done, what there is of it. I would like to see more coverage of the arts in Victoria. I see no reason for a city of our size not to have, at least, a full page every day. At the present, the system seems to be short notes of what is happening and occasional reviews. We're better off having this system than nothing at all but it has been like that for years. Isn't it time to expand the coverage? Victoria's Arts community has grown drastically in the last years but the newspaper coverage has not.

This is not the fault of Audrey who does very well with the amount of space given her. I would like to see an Arts Section that would include the present coverage and add things like letters from the public giving their opinions on events or even their opinion on the reviews of an event. It would be nice to see more articles on local and visiting artists, different groups and what they're trying to do and even articles on local drama programs being offered in the city and what their value to the community is.

Sports are fairly well covered in the paper, I would like to see proportionate coverage of the Arts as Well. — James K. Leard, 3143 Mars Street.

Rumor Unfounded

May I have a little of your space in order to refute a malicious and untruthful rumor which, I hear, is circulating in my husband's Riding of Esquimalt-Saanich.

I am quoted as saying that my husband, Donald Munro, MP, does not intend to seek re-election at the next federal election.

I most emphatically deny ever having made such a statement, nor have I ever said anything that might remotely be mistaken for such a statement.

News of this despicable attempt to undermine my husband's position through me, has only just reached me because, for the last week I have been in Ottawa fulfilling a promise made before the summer recess, to help in the coming by-election, the Conservative candidate running in John Turner's past constituency.

I can't help feeling that people who use such underhanded and untruthful measures to gain their ends, are hardly to be trusted.—Lyn Munro, 5035 Lochside Drive.

Massacre Them!

I cannot believe my own eyes and ears! People negotiating in good faith with convicted murderers holding hostages? It seems that the Israelis are the only people left with any guts. The only way to deal with hijackers, hostage takers or rioting prisoners is to make it known that there will be no bargaining and that force will be used as necessary. It would only take one or two displays of determination by our authorities and disturbances would disappear. Bargaining with convicted murderers for days on end as if they were union negotiators is the height of lunacy. A headline read "Prisoners afraid of Massacre." That is what should have happened to them. Prisoners have wrecked two jails. Let them live in them as they are — I don't want to pay for the repairs. They gave up their rights when they committed their crimes.

When will our softness end? — John Tregear, 6545 Sooke Rd.

Black Africans Ready For Rhodesia Leadership

By ROBIN WRIGHT
Washington Post

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Two are millionaires, among this capital's leading businessmen. Another, who holds degrees from Princeton and Oxford, is a sought-after public speaker and one of the most popular political science lecturers at the University of Rhodesia.

Two others are correspondents here for major white South African newspapers, and one sits on the board of directors of a publishing house. One is a prominent surgeon, and another did so well as an administrator with Shell Oil that he quit to open his own factory.

These eight men have one thing in common: They are all black Africans who have risen to prominence in this white-ruled society. They, and others like them, are candidates for leadership in Zimbabwe — as Rhodesia will be named — when majority rule becomes reality here.

Paradoxically, perhaps, Rhodesia's Africans are far better qualified to take over the reins of power than blacks in any other African country were at the time of independence. "Our blacks are light years ahead of other Africans," a white Rhodesian journalist conceded.

But their comparatively superior standard of living, higher qualifications and relative positions of responsibility have not led them to fight white domination, not even in the 11 years since the government of Prime Minister Ian Smith unilaterally declared independence from Britain.

Some of the country's 270,000 whites look at this and at the generally non-aggressive behavior of the pastoral Mashona people, who make up three-quarters of the country's 6 million blacks, as signs that blacks and whites may be able to live together peacefully under majority rule.

Only this year, for example, for the first time since whites settled in the southern African territory 86 years ago, has the guerrilla campaign become a significant threat.

Kenneth New, the white principal of Ranche House College, says that majority rule is not likely to bring the country the difficulties experienced by African countries that gained independence in the early 1960s. "The infrastructure is well established and the blacks are better prepared," he argues.

Nearby Zambia and Zaire had fewer than a hundred college graduates at independence; few others had more than 200. But there are between 4,000 and 5,000 African college graduates in Rhodesia, according to estimates by the University of Rhodesia. About 80 per cent of these received degrees at foreign universities. Rhodesia's illiteracy rate is about 50 per cent, one of the lowest on the continent.

Justice Nyoka, a black correspondent here for one of South Africa's white newspapers, points out that the executive of the African National Council — one of the main black organizations seeking majority rule—has two Ph.D. holders, three medical doctors, a dentist and several members who hold two or more university degrees. No member of Ian Smith's cabinet, he adds, holds a second degree.

Rhodesia's Africans are also more experienced in a greater variety of employment, although this is still a major problem since blacks in many fields have little chance for promotion to top positions. A high percentage of Africans with high degrees have gone to work abroad or in other African countries, especially neighboring Malawi, Botswana and Zambia, since there are few opportunities in Rhodesia, according to Gordon Chavanduka, a black lecturer at the University of Rhodesia.

Ironically, Rhodesia's status as an outcast made its Africans "popular, almost vogue" in the outside world, Chavanduka said. Many foreign institutions gave preference to Rhodesian students because of the political situation, resulting in a dramatic increase in the number of college graduates who are likely to return home under a black government.

Yet New also pointed out that "there is at least a strong pyramid here with a large black middle class, not the extreme we saw in Tanzania, where there were a few at the top but nothing to support it underneath."

The fields in which blacks have had comparatively ample opportunities — considering the legal and social limitations — are education, health, private business and industry. The more difficult areas to break in to are the armed forces, police and technical and mechanical jobs, according to the Rev. Robert Craig, vice-chancellor of the University of Rhodesia.

Yet "tasting" opportunities has not led to forceful anti-government activity until recently, after being aided by a shove from the outside world. Social anthropologists attribute this to historical, cultural and political patterns.

Rhodesia's oldest and largest tribe is the Mashona, which includes six independent subtribes. Their loose political structure of several individual chiefdoms never provided the unity required to resist white settlers, and their main squabbles were among themselves.

A second factor is the legendary passivity, according to sociologist Michael Bourdillon. The Mashona dominated the country until the Matabele, an offshoot branch of the militant Zulu, pushed up from what is now South Africa.

The Matabele, although numerically weaker, easily defeated the Mashona, taking large chunks of their land, women and cattle in the process.

To this day, Mashona Africans have largely maintained their non-aggressive behavior, in effect treating Rhodesia's white settlers with great deference, as if they were latter-day Zulu conquerors. Rhodesia's urban areas have not been hit with violence or terrorism. This is despite the fact that this would be the most effective action to force majority rule — especially now as the guerrilla war escalates rapidly and neighboring South Africa's townships are erupting almost regularly.

In fact, most whites have greater fears about a black-black power struggle than they do about retaliation against them. "That is the problem that makes me think about leaving," a white industrialist said. "They've been held back so long they may all want to take as much as they can. It's not majority rule I fear, because I think the Africans can handle it. It's the transition period that worries me."

Bilingualism: It's Time to Forget the Plains of Abraham

By KEITH SPICER

Bilingualism and biculturalism is beginning to sounc to many Canadians like Barnum and Bailey, with nobody taming the lions. Whether it's French TV in Vancouver, English-only speeding tickets in Ottawa, city hall plaques in Moncton, Bill 22 and air traffic control in Quebec, historical signs in Lethbridge or boorishness in Maple Leaf Gardens, the linguistic year so far seems to have etched a dismal calendar of flaps, hassles and unmuzzled nastiness.

Plainly, Canada, like any other society, has its noisy fringe of bigots and extremists. But to explain why today we often have the impression that it's the narrowest minds and the loudest mouths who speak for "English Canada" we must dig deeper. For those of us supposed to be working to make our two languages equal in fact as well as theory have failed to inspire the moderate majority to speak up too.

Reasons Lacking

We have failed to offer English-speaking Canadians deeply satisfying reasons to believe that our purpose of respecting and developing two national and world languages makes sense.

Parliament, in passing the Official Languages Act, wished to strengthen and add to civil rights, not diminish them; a better wording for this wish might be "linguistic equality," "language reform" or even "language development."

But its main aim should be to create a climate, with suitable structures and guarantees, in which our two official languages plainly enjoy near-universal respect among Canadians as a cherished national advantage.

Obviously, our view of language as either an advantage or a pain in the neck colors every other motivation. And all the usually cited reasons let us persist in our quaint Canadian aberration of considering languages as obstacles to understanding; not, as nearly every other country on earth does, as opportunities to communicate with fellow human beings on a more intimate and satisfying level.

But at bottom, most of us, whether of English or French mother tongue, seem to view languages as an obstacle rather than an opportunity precisely because in our historical subconscious they are an obstacle to accepting each other as equals. This imagery is offensive to both language groups, and that's why I'm inclined to think it's apt: The emotional block on both sides was cast on the Plains of Abraham.

The nasty truth may well be that, in spite of all protests to the contrary, Canadians have got hooked on their victor-vanquished relationship. But after 200 years we ought, on both sides, to try other elegant variations on our national theme.

Any healthy English-French relationship in Canada must rest on the commanding and obvious, to all the world except many Canadians, fact that history has handed our country two world languages on a silver platter.

One can argue the case for languages as opportunities. Unless you think every child in Canada should be condemned at age five to spend the rest of his life in only limited sectors of Canada—geographic, professional, cultural sectors—it makes sense to give every child, by at least high school graduation, the linguistic vehicles for the kind of vastly increased mobility the next generations will need. This could be a goal as modest and reasonable as preparing him to read a newspaper or carry a simple conversation in the second language.

. . . an opportunity

The success of Canada's language reform has always rested on two imperatives: First, that French-speaking Canadians believe the reform is serious; and second, that English-speaking Canadians believe the reform is useful and humane.

These twin standards of credibility must constantly guide the implementation of Canadian language policy by clearly showing how reform can benefit each language group.

Fatal Flaw?

Our failure to recognize and nourish the ideals, the latent goodwill, of the average Canadian is perhaps the fatal flaw in our past approach to explaining the reform. From the outset, no doubt badly singed by the sometimes angry 1969 debate on the "controversial" Official Languages Act, we spoke too little of the benefits reform could bring to all Canadians. Instead, we nervously persisted in reassuring English-speaking Canadians merely that no real harm would befall them.

In failing thus, we were reminding French-speaking Canadians how little we really cared for their language as a national resource. We made it sound more like a crippling and embarrassing drawback, a politically necessary evil to be tolerated — never an advantage to be nurtured.

And so, we ended up disappointing both groups. Even today, large numbers of English-speaking Canadians — notably those totally unaffected by the reform — complain that we are still forcing French down their throat; while many French-speakers complain, with far more reason, that we have sinned with lack of zeal.

What can we do to break the momentum of despair? It seems to me we have to act quickly to prevent the argument about "bilingualism" in aviation from further overshadowing the solid progress already made on so many other fronts of language reform. Then we must move within the next two or three months to strengthen fundamentally the "French" and "English" pillars of the reform's credibility.

As everyone has now seen, the quarrel over language in air traffic control contains the seeds of a dangerous polarization of Canadians into two hostile cultural camps. The government has set up a commission of inquiry to propose a solution to this problem, and every Canadian can do his part in helping it succeed by trying to keep a dispassionate, open mind.

In the meantime the government should set about restoring the two basic imperatives for linguistic progress.

First this means, with a precise and urgent timetable, publicly rededicating the federal administration at all levels to developing equal service and work opportunities for French-speaking Canadians. This does not necessarily require large new chunks of rhetoric or money.

It requires, above all, more imagination and practicality in getting the ordinary federal employee to understand his and his country's advantage in making language reform work.

Once the government makes plain its commitment to fresh and better-monitored vigilance on behalf of French-speakers' rights in our institutions, it should offer English-speakers a parallel hope of benefit through a deeper long-term commitment to personal language opportunities for average citizens, and especially children.

'Youth Option'

For six years already Ottawa has pursued such a "youth option," albeit on a modest, experimental basis.

Right now the largest youth exchange program in Canada is the France-Quebec exchange. That program is excellent, but surely the absence of anything of similar scope between young English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians should give some cause for thought.

So should the government's decision to cut this year's grant to one of the best private Canadian exchanges — that of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews — indeed to abolish its entire travel and exchange program without yet announcing a better formula for its replacement.

The word is also that freezes or insignificant increases will affect the three low-budget, high-payoff youth-and-language programs which seem to offer the prospect of the most early public benefit and support: The Interprovincial Second Language Monitors Program, the Summer Language Bursary Program, and the Special Projects program.

On all of these fronts, the government could count on massive popular support were it to review its course. And it could count equally on the co-operation of provincial governments in developing indispensible basic reforms in teacher training and curriculum.

Already thousands of younger parents in English-speaking Canada have sought this hope in demanding courses in partial or total French immersion for their children.

Children Involved

Outside of large-scale immersion in Montreal and Ottawa where the need seems more obvious, citizens in at least Halifax, Toronto, Guelph, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver have initiated experiments in such classes, each embracing hundreds of children.

In Ontario recently, the Progressive Conservative Youth Association urged compulsory one-hour-a-day French for every elementary school child and opportunities for French immersion in every school board in that province.

In the Calgary public schools alone — not counting similar efforts in its private and Catholic schools — enrolment in French immersion has risen from 55 three years ago to over 600 now, and the waiting list was closed after several hundred more applied.

Their common sense casts the overblown "English" fanaticism of the air crisis and the hockey howlers in the light of a larger moderation which our leaders should urgently encourage.

Even if collectively we screw our heads back on and start to look at our languages as rich and liberating opportunities, we shall have to walk many a tightrope between "English" and "French" visions of Canada.

But by cultivating the courage to be moderate, by speaking out to deny all three rings to those who would divide us to flatter or fool the crowd, we shall find courage not only to walk the tightrope together. But courage, perhaps, from time to time, to tame a lion or two.

Letting It All Hang Out

By GARY LAUTENS

U.S. presidential candidate Jimmy Carter revealed in Playboy magazine that he had "mentally" committed adultery. Is this just the beginning of a new form of confession? Will these celebrities be next?

Ed Broadbent, national leader of the NDP: I don't like to think about it but, yes, there was a time just a few years back when I was walking down the street and I saw this old geezer in an expensive suit, driving a big Mercedes, and turning into one of those restaurants where it's $50 a plate easy. He had a big ring on his finger—a diamond, I think — and for a split second I said to myself, "I wish I was making $100,000 a year."

I've never mentioned it to anyone before because, naturally, I'm ashamed of myself, wanting a big, fat salary and all. Fortunately, I only thought about it; I didn't go out and try to earn the big money, thank heaven, and I'm sure God will find it in His heart to forgive me for the time I mentally wanted to be a capitalist.

W. Earle McLaughlin, chairman of the Royal Bank of Canada: There was one low moment in my life when I harbored a despicable thought, something that even now fills me with remorse. I was walking downtown when I spotted this striking woman carrying a copy of the Financial Times under one arm and a briefcase under the other.

She was built just like an accountant and one look told me she knew all about balance sheets, debentures and tricky things like mortgage rates.

Immediately I had an urge to accost her on the spot and take down her references. It was almost irresistible, this feeling I had to — can I say it? — make her a director with the Royal Bank!

I wanted, no, that's not strong enough a word; I lusted after her fiscal know-how and knew if she showed me just a glimpse of her stock portfolio, I'd be lost.

So I turned away. I fought off the Devil's temptation. But I still feel shame for the time I threw away all principle and mentally made a woman a director with the Royal.

Phil Exposito, centre with Team Canada: Now that you mention it, yes, there was a bleak moment recently when I committed a mental sin. I was standing in front of the Czech net during one of the games, knocking people down, stuffing my stick down throats, and applying karate chops — you know, just the usual thing.

Anyway, there was this Czech player, eh, and he's standing there with his back to me and, all of a sudden, the thought flashed into my mind that maybe I shouldn't bash his head in, or dive him into the goalposts.

I don't know why my mind should go all funny like that but, for a split-second, I just stood there, not whacking him or anything. Then I got control of myself again, and gave it to him good.

God is supposed to be forgiving and I just hope He understands.

Robert Bourassa, premier of Quebec and author of Bill 22: It will be a great relief to finally tell of my weakness and sin.

A few months ago I had a dream that I was a criminal, that I robbed banks, mugged old ladies, and did a variety of things not acceptable.

No, no, no — that was not the sin. All of us at one time or another have violent dreams that mean nothing.

But halfway through my dream I realized I was dreaming . . . in English!

Oh, the shame! It was only a mental lapse, but I pray merciful God will forgive my — sob! — disgusting behavior . . .

RENOVATING SKYLAB LIKELY SHUTTLE JOB

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. space agency is considering sending astronauts in 1980 up to the abandoned Skylab space station in earth orbit to rocket it into a higher orbit for possible later use.

Melvyn Savage, director of advanced development, said the idea is to use the new space shuttle rocket plane and its manipulator arms to attach a small rocket unit to the 84-ton Skylab.

The shuttle pilots also may spacewalk to the orbiting laboratory to retrieve a bag of samples left behind by astronauts Gerald Carr, Edward Gibson and William Pogue when they departed Skylab on Feb. 8, 1974, after spending a record 84 days aloft.

Skylab was left in an orbit 270 by 281 miles high, but since then has dropped to within 255 miles of earth under the drag of the tenuous upper fringes of atmosphere.

As it moves into the thicker portions of the upper atmosphere, skylab's orbit will drop lower and lower and there is a possibility it might re-enter the atmosphere before 1980.

Savage said that there is a "fair probability" it will still be in orbit by the time astronauts could get to it.

He said in an interview the possible mission is being considered for the shuttle's sixth and final planned space test flight, now scheduled for March, 1980. After that the space plane is to become operational to carry men and satellites to and from orbit on a routine basis.

The first shuttle was rolled out of its assembly hangar at Palmdale, Calif., last month and is being prepared for atmospheric flight tests next year. A second shuttle is to make the first test flight into orbit from Cape Canaveral in March, 1979.

Savage said the skylab flight would have two objectives. It would preserve the old space station for possible use in later years, and it would give the shuttle a realistic test of its abilities to rendezvous and work with a satellite.

"It provides an extremely real life situation to demonstrate what the shuttle can really do as far as working on an in-orbit satellite," he said. "This really is a new capability."

Savage, who was director of engineering in the Skylab program, said the space station could not be occupied by astronauts unless they wore pressurized space suits because the laboratory's environmental and electrical systems were shut down when the last crew left it.

He said there are no plans now to use Skylab later but engineers are thinking of several possibilities, including using the station as a space warehouse to store items in orbit.

Savage said it also might be possible to recondition Skylab later for manned use by building a new power, stabilization and supply module to be carried up to it by the space shuttle.

The initial mission under consideration would be limited primarily to attaching the rocket section to the lab to push it into a higher orbit.

Ford Losing Grip in Popularity Poll

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A major opinion poll released today shows President Ford has slipped badly after sharply cutting into Jimmy Carter's lead about two weeks ago.

As Ford went on the offensive in the key electoral states of New York and New Jersey, the Gallup Poll showed Carter's lead has been cut to two per cent before their televised foreign policy debate a week ago.

But Carter aides say they have been told that the next Gallup Poll, to be released during the weekend, will report that Carter's lead has since jumped to 10 per cent — presumably because of Ford's fumbles in the debate.

Ford is believed to have damaged his stature in the debate, the second of three before the Nov. 2 election, chiefly because of his claim that the Soviet Union does not dominate Eastern Europe.

He has since attempted to clarify his remarks.

The new Gallup poll shows Carter led Ford 47 to 45 per cent before last Wednesday's debate. Ford's recovery at that point was the sharpest ever made in a presidential election but was immediately overshadowed by reports that the tide was swinging against him again.

As Carter rested at his home in Plains, Ga., for a few days, Ford attempted to mend his political fences with his retraction of his remarks about Eastern Europe and by campaigning Tuesday in Brooklyn's predominantly Jewish and heavily Democratic sections.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday rejected attacks on Federal Communications Commission rules permitting broadcasters to televise the Ford-Carter debates without triggering "equal time" requirements for other presidential candidates.

Without comment the court let stand decisions by the U.S. court of appeals approving FCC rulings that debates and news conferences involving presidential candidates were "bona fide news" events exempt from the federal equal time law.

Although Carter is debating Ford in three two-way contests that exclude other candidates, the Democratic National Committee was one of Tuesday's unsuccessful challengers to the FCC rules. The others were Rep. Shirley Chisholm (Dem.—N.Y.) and the Socialist Workers party.

Nobody Stands a Chance With These Supporters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They held a presidential campaign rally in front of city Hall — and Nobody showed up.

But that was fine with Wavy Gravy and the rest of the crowd from the Nobody for President campaign, who kicked off a national tour under a warm October sun in Civic Plaza on Tuesday.

The arrival of the candidate was strategically timed for late in the rally. The candidate's motoreade, a battered sportscar, drove across the sidewalk with a bunting-festooned wooden chair mounted on the trunk.

Nobody was sitting in it.

Around the improvised stage were hung banners carrying slogans such as "Nobody loves the poor," "Nobody will end war," and "Nobody will lower your taxes."

Gravy, a San Francisco Bay area counterculture hero who said he's Nobody's Fool, was smeared with white clown makeup for the occasion. He told the estimated 200 people gathered around the reflecting pool that Nobody would address the crwod.

Then, a pair of plastic wind-up teeth chattered into the microphone in response to questions on foreign and domestic issues.

Gravy, along with other anti-establishment figures of the 1960s and early '70s, ran the Hog Farm commune in Sonoma County north of San Francisco. The group became known for rock music festivals and carnivals and for a variety of zany astics centered on the area's counterculture lifestyle.

Paul Krassner, editor of The Realist magazine and himself a substantial counterculture figure, told the crowd he wanted to see Nobody get elected.

"If we need an official greeter for the country, we can get Harry Belafonte or Paul Newman," he said.

Even Democratic hopeful Jimmy Carter gave Nobody a boost on one visit to San Francisco, Krassner said, when he told the throng assembled to see him that "nobody has all the answers."

"We all cheered and he didn't quite know why."

Nixon Aides Unlikely To Get Chance at Appeal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Based on statistics, the U.S. Supreme Court is unlikely to grant the appeals of former Attorney General John Mitchell and former Nixon White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John Erhlichman.

The convictions of all three for obstructing justice and lying to a grand jury while covering up White House involvement in the 1972 Watergate break-in were affirmed Tuesday on a 6-1 vote by the U.S. circuit court of appeals, which cited an "overwhelming evidence of guilt."

Each man faces a 2½ to 8-year prison sentence. All three currently are free, but Sirica can soon order them to report to federal marshals to begin serving their sentences unless blocked by higher courts.

Mitchell, if jailed, would be the first former cabinet officer sent to prison since former interior secretary Albert Fall was confined for a year in connection with the Teaport Dome scandal in the 1920s.

Lawyers who could be reached vowed to take their clients' cases to the Supreme Court and ask for reversal on various grounds, including the argument that pervasive publicity made a fair trial in the District of Columbia impossible.

Only co-defendant Robert Mardian was a winner Tuesday. The appeals court ruled unanimously that when his lawyer was hospitalized early in the trial, the former assistant attorney general should have been allowed to stand trial separately.

The Watergate special prosecutor's office has not made a decision on whether to drop charges against Mardian, retry him, or take its own appeal to the Supreme Court.

Statistically, fewer than 10 per cent of the nonindigent appeals reaching the high court are granted. For Watergate-related offences the statistics are worse. The high court has turned down every appeal connected with the case since its historic July 1972, decision ordering Nixon to turn White House tapes over to the special prosecutor.

'Right-to-Die' Draws Hundreds

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Californians who "fear living as a human vegetable" more than death are seeking to draw up "living wills" under the state's new right-to-die law.

More than 600 letters to the author of the law, the first in the nation, have sought information about making the so-called "living will" that allows terminally ill adults to choose to die rather than be kept alive as long as possible by medical treatment.

"Death I do not fear, but I do fear living as a human vegetable," said one of the letters received by assemblyman Barry Keene (Dem-Eureka), who was prompted to draw up the act by the case of comatose Karen Ann Quinlan in New Jersey.

"I am 77 years old, and like many of my peers, dread being kept alive in some nursing home far past the time when God would like me to be left alone," wrote another.

One nurse wrote: "I have seen so many human beings suffer in a state of near-death and it is ghastly."

Specifically, the law will allow persons over 18 to order doctors to withdraw life sustaining procedures if they face "imminent death" and artificial techniques serve no purpose but to postpone it.

The directive, to be witnessed by two other persons, could be revoked either orally or in writing. Physicians will be immune from civil or criminal prosecution if they follow the order.

State officials plan to meet with lawyers and doctors to draw up precise directions for completion of the form.

Lawyers, nurses, legislators from other states and nations also sent Keene letters asking for copies of the new law.

Bumper Crops, But Low Prices

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. farmers have produced a record corn crop and the second largest wheat crop in history even though some grain growing areas were hit hard by severe summer drought, the U.S. department of agriculture reported Tuesday.

Those big American harvests, combined with excellent farm output in the Soviet Union and South Asia, mean that the world should have ample supplies of grain to feed people and animals in the months ahead.

These supplies should, in turn, help check food inflation in the United States. Department economists estimate Tuesday American consumers will pay about 3 per cent more for food in 1976 than in 1975, a modest increase measured against the rampant inflation in recent years.

However, as consumers have begun to benefit, wheat farmers have started to complain bitterly about declining prices. Department officials said Tuesday that the falling wheat prices could emerge as an issue in the final stages of the presidential election campaign.

A bushel of wheat sold Monday at Kansas City for $2.74¾, compared with more than $4 a bushel a year ago.

Poison Details Sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission is being asked to order a massive revamping of labels on some 50,000 or more poisons, household cleaners and other products which may offer users incomplete or dangerous advice.

The first aid instruction on some labels is so vague that it is dangerous, and in other instances the print used is unreadably small, according to a petition filed with the commission by Herbert Denenberg, former insurance vania.

Denenberg, now a consumer commissioner for Pennsyl- reporter for a Philadelphia television station and a newspaper columnist, told the agency he encountered the problems in the course of his work.

"This mislabeled product explosion leads to needless deaths, injuries and damage to the economy and environment," he said. "Mislabeled products lead to needless poisoning of children and all sorts of tragedies."

He asked the government to require the rewriting of virtually every poison label on the market, and said: "There are perhaps 50,000 different products, probably more, that have labels which pose a threat to life or property."

Ford Plant Rolls Today

DETROIT (AP) — Workers at several Ford Motor Co. plants dusted off the machinery so assembly lines could start up today after the United Auto Workers (UAW) narrowly ratified a national contract to settle a four-week-old strike.

But it will be at least several days before the company's 102 plants in 22 states get back to normal because of unresolved local contract disputes at key manufacturing plants.

Production workers ratified the accord 35,192 to 22,026, while skilled tradesmen—who could have vetoed it—approved it 8,957 to 8,468.

Within an hour of the union's announcement late Tuesday that the three-year pact had been approved, several dozen workers began arriving at Ford's transmission plant in suburban Livonia, Mich., where the firm had hastily slated a midnight shift.

The No. 2 auto maker said one of its 18 car and truck assembly plants — in Wixom, Mich.—would reopen this afternoon, while assembly lines in Los Angeles, Chicago and Norfolk, Va., would begin operations Thursday. A company spokesman said manufacturing plants with local contracts also would begin reopening today.

The union now takes the pattern agreement adopted at Ford to the other U.S. auto makers, where it must negotiate similar agreements covering another 530,000 workers at General Motors, Chrysler and American Motors.

The Ford agreement includes an additional seven paid days off by 1979 for a total of 40, a three-per-cent annual wage hike plus 20 cents an hour in the first year, continued cost-of-living protection, improved fringe benefits, and a supplemental wage hike for tradesmen.

Under the pact, the average assembly line worker will be making an estimated $8.34 an hour by 1979, up from a current $6.57, while the average toolmaker will be making $10.32, up from a current $8.15.

ISSUE SOFT-PEDALLED

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — What could have become a "cause celebre" between motorists and bicycle riders here was defused Tuesday when a judge dismissed charges against pedaller Dr. Donald Fager.

Municipal court Judge Robert Graham said he did not doubt that police were right when they issued a traffic ticket to Fager. But, he said, he didn't want the case to get out of hand and blown out of proportion.

Fager was ticked several weeks ago while riding his bicycle in a traffic lane on Mission Street, a one-way road through town. Officer Alan Grider said three cars were backed up behind Fager, a physician who was traveling slowly.

Police said Fager was failing to heed laws requiring bicycle riders to not impede the flow of traffic.

780,000 Workers Face Cancer Threat from Oil

WASHINGTON (WP) — Significant concentrations of a potent cancer-causing agent have been found in the synthetic oils an estimated 780,000 industrial workers use regularly to reduce friction and heat in metal cutting.

The U.S. National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) is sending an alert to about 2,000 managements, unions and health officials, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The agent is a member of a chemical family called nitrosamines that cause cancer in animals and is suspected of causing it in humans. In rats, the cutting-oils agent causes liver tumors.

Nitrosamines combine nitrites, which are formed from the nitrates widely present in the environment, and amines, which are in a large variety of products including foods and drugs.

Most cutting oils contain large proportions of nitrites and amines that are added to inhibit rust and for other purposes.

Using a sensitive new detection method called thermo energy analysis, scientists at Thermo Electron Corp., in Waltham, Mass., found that in eight brands of cutting oils, nitrites and amines had combined to form "relatively massive amounts" of the agent.

The scientists, including Drs. David Fine and T. Y. Fan, reported the finding last Sept. 14 to the National Science Foundation, which funded the research. The NSF notified the four manufacturers of the eight brands on Sept. 16.

Four days later, NIOSH director John F. Finklea told Congress that cutting oils are "an occupational health problem of some concern."

NIOSH made a study of nitrosamines in 13 workplaces, Finklea told a hearing of the house commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee.

RECORD YEAR IN ADVERTISING

NEW YORK (WP) — "It appears 1976 was the strongest year advertising has had for nearly 30 years," the chief economist for the advertising firm of McCann-Erickson Inc. said Tuesday. He predicted that 1977 would see another big jump in ad expenditures.

Advertising revenues in 1976 should total $33 billion in 1976, up 16.7 per cent from last year, with the greatest gains coming in network and local televison, where broadcast ad rates have increased more than 20 per cent, Robert Coen told a briefing for reporters and Wall Street analysts.

He said this represented the greatest one-year increase since 1946, when ad budgets boomed after the end of the Second World War, and the first year in a decade in which advertising expenditures have outpaced the growth of the country's gross national product.

Coen, who is noted for his industry expenditure projections, said advertising revenues for 1977 would grow from 8 to 13 per cent to total between $35.5 billion and $37.25 billion. He said he was assuming the U.S. economy in 1977 would grow between 4 and 5 per cent in real terms, with inflation adding another 5 to 6 per cent to GNP.

This year was "something of a phenomenon," he noted. "We anticipated a good year, but nowhere as good as it turned out to be."

The extraordinary gain this year was attributed primarily to an increase in advertsing rates, and secondarily to a gain in actual advertising volume

Coen cited the bounce-back in the country's economy, such exceptional 1976 events as the Bicentennial, the national elections and the winter and summer Olympics.

Sleep more peacefully tonight with the Sunbeam Smoke Sensor alarm system

...its flashing power signal is just one of seven advanced safety features

Why every home should have a smoke detector
Firefighters and fire prevention authorities all recommend the use of smoke detectors in private homes.
The reason: most fire victims die of asphyxiation, not burns. And close to half, these experts say, might be saved by early warning of fire.
The smoke detector's job is to provide this early warning—before smoke, flame or fumes are even apparent. And that's how a dependable detector can give you almost priceless peace of mind.

Which detector to choose
With so many smoke detectors available, how do you choose? These facts might help you.
The sooner your smoke detector is able to sense combustion and sound the alarm, the more time you and your family have to escape...and the more faith you can put in it. You want a unit as reliable as modern science can make it, with every possible check and countercheck built in.

Sunbeam safety facts
Above all, note the Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm uses a "dual ionization" system. It senses combustion at the earliest stage of fire—often before you can see or smell smoke—to give you the earliest possible warning.

Inconspicuous, easy to install
The Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm system mounts unobtrusively on your ceiling. Modern, neatly styled in soft white, it blends with any decor. You can install it yourself with just two screws; no wiring or special hardware is needed.

Consider all the safety features Sunbeam offers
Test button. Tests the entire system: battery, circuit, sensing chambers, alarm.
Operating light. 60-second repeating light shows unit is getting power.
Solid state. Advanced circuitry is trouble-free, dependable.
Battery operated. Self-contained, works even when house power fails. Unit comes complete with special, 12.6-volt Mallory Duracell® battery.

Make this your season for family safety
Consider the months ahead...the season for home heating, enjoying the fireplace, entertaining, Christmas trees and lights.
What wiser time to safeguard your family with the Sunbeam SMOKE SENSOR alarm system. For under $50, including battery, it could be one of the best investments in family security you'll ever make.

AIB Won't Touch Postal Row

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board has decided to keep its hands off a controversy over the postal rates of cross-border newspapers, magazines and other publications.

Jean-Luc Pepin, AIB chairman, said Tuesday the matter was raised to the board by representatives of Canadian publications about a month ago and the board decided its jurisdiction in the matter was "very tenuous at best."

Central to the problem is a decision by the Canadian and U.S. post offices, in consultation with publishers in each country who sell their publications into the other country, to establish a standard postal rate for such publications. The rates are substantially higher than the piece-meal rates charged previously for such publications.

Canadian publications that had cost five cents for four ounces to mail prior to Jan. 1 rose to 20 cents and will rise to 25 cents next Jan. 1. Those weighing eight ounces went to 36 cents from seven cents and will rise again to 45 cents next Jan. 1.

Negotiations had been going on since the early 1970s and the U.S. applied its standardized postal rate two years ago while Canada continued negotiations with publishers here.

Canadian publishers subsequently were given about 3½-months warning that the government intended to impose its standardized rates by order-in-council.

The complicating factor was imposition of the anti-inflation program between the time the publishers were notified of the increase and its imposition.

The publishers who brought the matter to the board claimed that after Oct. 14, 1975, the Anti-Inflation Board had control of such rate increases.

Trudeau Won't Cross Reporter Picket Line

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau lent his weight to the employees in the long-simmering Canadian Press furore Tuesday by refusing to cross a picket line at the National Press Building where he was to have held a post-Throne Speech news conference.

About 275 reporters, editors and other staff at CP, Canada's national news-gathering co-operative, have held brief rotating strikes across the country earlier this year, but Tuesday was believed to be the first time that five or six different bureaus acted in unison.

Their complaint is that after a year of negotiations with general manager John Dauphinee, The Newspaper Guild has been unable to get management to agree to a proposal widely accepted in the contracts individual CP newspapers have with unionized staff.

This is that new employees, while not being required to join the union, would have dues deducted from their pay.

Trudeau, faced with picket line outside the National Press Building Tuesday, said he was not prepared to cross it.

He and his staff withdrew to the Centre Block, where he held a less-formal news conference in a basement television studio.

Trudeau was free to enter the press centre if he had so wished, but on finding out it was a legal strike, felt he could not.

"When I can avoid crossing a picket line, I do," he said.

Some Edmonton Workers Return

EDMONTON (CP) — More than 100 inside city hall workers who went on strike last Thursday have returned to work, chief commissioner Doug Burrows said Tuesday.

Commissioner Burrows told city council that 104 members of Local 52 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees defied their union the first day after the strike began and there were even more back at work Tuesday.

Burrows said the city and union resumed negotiations Tuesday but the city still felt its 10.2-per-cent wage offer was fair.

Ald. David Leadbeater asked whether any of the 104 union members who returned to work had passes "or were they strike breakers?" He said the question was important because Local 52 had issued a number of its union members passes to work during the strike.

Commissioner Burrows replied that it was his understanding that the members who returned to work were people "just exercising their right to come to work."

About 2,600 workers are involved in the strike. The union has set up picket lines around city hall and various other city buildings, including a community day-care centre in north Edmonton.

Rusty Ford Payoff Called Not Enough

MONTREAL (CP) — The compensation plan announced by the Ford Motor Co. of Canada for owners of rusty Fords is inadequate, said Phil Edmonston, head of the Automobile Protection Association.

"The settlement is likely to satisfy owners of 1973 and 1974 Fords but it will leave a lot of people unhappy," Mr. Edmonston told a news conference Tuesday.

He said the plan, following court decisions which held Ford responsible for repairs on some cars that rusted prematurely, does not help second owners of Ford cars and those who made rust repairs on vehicles before the settlement was announced last month.

He added some owners of 1970, 1971 and 1972 models may be required to pay more for rust repairs than their cars are worth. For example, he said it might cost the owner of a badly-rusted 1970 Ford about $1,200 in repairs.

Under the settlement the company agreed to pay a maximum of $300 to original owners of cars for repairs to corrosion perforations caused by salt.

"We're asking all Ford owners—even if they are excluded from compensation—to call the company to see what Ford will do with their complaints," Mr. Edmonston said.

These people should get a formal refusal from Ford at which point they can ask the association to prepare a dossier and take it to small claims court, he said.

CP FLIGHTS CUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air said Tuesay two routes to Europe are being temporarily suspended as a result of economic circumstances and forcasts for the next 12 months.

The company said it has reached a commercial agreement whereby the Montreal-Tel Aviv-Montreal routes will be operated for the time being by El Al. This arrangement will be effective in November, subject to the approval of both governments.

CP Air's one flight a week from Canada to Madrid also is being suspended.

CP Air said it will maintain its sales office and marketing in Israel.

Pro-Westerners Attack Confederation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, confederation and central Canada were attacked Tuesday night when 200 persons attended the first Vancouver meeting of the Committee for Western Independence.

Victoria lawyer Douglas Christie, founder of the committee, said Canada is confronted with a constitutional crisis that threatens the rights of western Canadians to enjoy their natural resources.

With Ontario and Quebec getting veto power in the constitution issue they will continue to control all future conferences on confederation, he said.

"The West will never get back from confederation anything like it has put into it. We should be assured of an opting out formula before we agree to patriate the constitution."

Christie said the West has been a pool of resources and captive market for central Canada for 100 years.

"But those days are numbered and it is time to organize political action. Otherwise the federal government will continue to drain our life blood."

Created 'Ugly Scene,' Trucker Gets Probation

A 45-year-old Prince George trucker, Myler Brevick, was given a conditional discharge Tuesday but placed on probation for one year for his part in a fracas involving the unloading of a load of pipe July 1, 1975.

Brevick was convicted by a county court jury last month of assault causing bodily harm to Frederick Watters, 4545 Wilkinson.

Delivery of a $4,000 load of pipe to Watters resulted in a two-family fracas.

County court Judge E. J. C. Stewart told Brevick "it was an ugly scene and you created it." He said he was seriously thinking of a jail sentence but that would not be a proper disposition because of Brevick's criminal-free record.

He accepted the submission of Brevick's counsel, Roger Cardinal, that this was an isolated incident not likely to reoccur and "of a nature that has not happened before, as far as we know."

Cardinal submitted numerous letters from friends and business associates of Brevick, who runs a trucking and building supplies business, attesting to his good character.

He attributed the trouble, in part, to a lack of sleep because Brevick had worked 36 to 40 hours and a clash of personalities.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

John Angus Hourigan pleaded guilty to a charge of wilful damage and was fined $35 and ordered to pay for a $60 window Tuesday by Judge W. E. Ostler.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan told the court that Hourigan had been drinking in the cocktail lounge at the Ingraham Hotel, 2915 Douglas, and became involved in a dispute with hotel staff.

He then left the lounge, Mulligan said, and kicked the window.

Ostler levied the fine, imposed a three-month probation on Hourigan and ordered him to pay $60 to the hotel within two months.

"I wish that I could help you, but I can't," Ostler commented before signing recommittal papers for Robert Allan Duff.

Duff appeared before Ostler because probation authorities feared Duff would breach his probation if allowed to be free.

Prosecutor Mulligan agreed with Ostler that the judge's hands were tied in this case because all that was required of the judge was that he be certain the person named in the writ was the person before him.

Duff argued that probation authorities had no grounds to recommit him and told Ostler that he is on maximum methadone dosage in a treatment program at the Victoria alcohol and drug centre.

Duff said he was released from Wilkinson Road jail April 18 and had been attending the drug centre since then.

Fines totalling $2,300 were levied by Judge Blake Allen for drinking-driving offences.

Fined were Warren Weston Cameron, 55, of 4440 Simcoe; Herman Joseph James, 39, of 12 Cooper; Leslie Allyn Purdy, 20, of 3801 Carey; Cameron Angus Marshall, 20, of 1237 Walnut.

Two persons were fined in traffic court following pleas of guilty to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent. They were Leonard David Baird, 32, of 580 Cedarcrest, stopped Aug. 4 in Esquimalt and fined $450, and George Louie Charlie, 49, of 97 Tsartlip, April 23 in Sidney and $350.

Dominique Leonard McGraw, 21, of 606 Galiano, pleaded guilty to an Esquimalt charge of impaired driving Oct. 4 and was fined $450.

Hearing Set For Mozure

A preliminary hearing will begin Jan. 13 in Nanaimo for Gerald Donald Mozure, 22, of Parksville, charged with attempted extortion.

Provincial Court Judge Stan Wardill set the date for Mozure who elected trial by judge and jury.

The extortion charge was laid after a Qualicum Beach resident was contacted by telephone Sept. 23 and told to pay $35,000 or face the prospect of a bomb being used against her.

Mozure was released on $2,500 surety bail.

TWICE AS NICE
A budget priced twist that offers much more than the price indicates. Made from DuPont's high lustre nylon, this product provides durability as well as a stylish tone on tone finish. Available in 8 excellent colours.
SUGGESTED RETAIL: $12.95 per sq. yd. ..... 9.50 sq. yd.

LEEWARD
The carpet man's carpet. This product offers pure luxury in the heavy Saxony look. Treated for static control, Leeward is available in a wide range of contemporary colours including Midnight Black.
SUGGESTED RETAIL: $18.95 per sq. yd. 13.90 sq. yd.

HARBOUR VIEW
This C.M.H.C. approved all nylon plush continues to be the most "in-demand" carpet quality in the country. Styled in fast selling colours.
SUGGESTED RETAIL: $10.95 per sq. yd. .... 8.70 sq. yd.

STYLE PLUSH—CARVED
Elegance in the fine denier look, Style Plush is made from DuPont's new 850-10 denier nylon program and is made in a graceful carved pattern. A lustrous product with a very soft hand, Style Plush is available in a broad up-to-the-minute colour range.
SUGGESTED RETAIL: $13.95 per sq. yd. 10.65 sq. yd.

PORTS OF CALL
Completely restyled, this long time winner is constructed in bulked continuous filament and spun yarns for a soft hand and lustrous look. This "Saxony look" product is now available in a range of 19 new colours.
SUGGESTED RETAIL: $12.95 per sq. yd. .... 9.75 sq. yd.

The agreement was signed between Tyee Lake Resources Ltd. of Vancouver and Peregrine Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary and Noranda group companies Noranda Exploration Co. and Kerr Addison Mines Ltd. A Tyee spokesman said Noranda will make cash payments totalling $1 million to Tyee and Peregrine over a maximum four-year period.

Premier Cable

Premier Cablevision Ltd. of Vancouver reports net earnings of $3,370,000, or $1.08 a share, for the year ended Aug. 31, compared with earnings of $2,293,000, or 71 cents a share, for the 1975 fiscal year. The 1975 earnings were calculated after writing off a $670,000 investment in its United Kingdom subsidiary, Albion Cablevision. Operating revenue in the last fiscal year was $33,290,000, compared with $27,825,000 in 1975.

Amdahl

Amdahl Corp. reports a record quarter for both sales and profits. Revenues for the third quarter, which ended Sept. 24, were $26,045,000, nearly 100 per cent greater than revenues for the second quarter of fiscal 1976. Third quarter revenues were about equal to total revenues for the first two quarters, bringing the nine-month total to $52,336,000. Net income for the three-month and nine-month periods was $6,898,000, or 99 cents per share, and $9,972,000, or $1.69 per share, respectively, after giving effect to an extra-ordinary credit for tax loss carryovers of $3,302,000 and $4,775,000. Net income before extraordinary credit for the quarter was 3,596,000, or 52 cents per share, up from $874,000, or 19 cents per share, the previous quarter. Net income for the nine months was $5,197,000, or 88 cents per share.

RAINCOATS SOLD IN THE DESERT

LONDON (UPI) — A rainwear firm has gone one up on the super-salesman who sold refrigerators to Eskimos.

They sell raincoats by the truckload in parched areas like the Gulf States — average rainfall very often nil.

Now the company, A. Grantham Ltd., of Brighton, is to receive a Queens award to industry for outstanding export achievement.

They specialize in uniforms for police, armed forces, airlines, and fire brigades — and raincoats are part of the kit.

Last year, Arab states like Abu Dhabi, Bahrain and Dubai, plus 15 scorching African countries — bought nearly $5.1 million worth.

Sales director Peter Edwards said "It may seem odd selling raincoats to places where there is hardly anything but desert.

"But those who wear the uniforms have to be prepared."

Commuter's Love Nothing But a Road Block

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

In a way David Langley is trying to break up this long-standing love affair but he's the first to admit he can't do it alone.

Langley, 40, was recently added to the regional government staff of the Capital district as transportation planner. The love affair of course is the one so many North Americans have with their cars, as deeply entrenched as the cowboy's passion for his horse.

Devotion like that means traffic jams, longer each year, as those who travel the Trans-Canada Highway for example between Victoria and the "western community" will tell you any day.

In so many rush-hour traffic line-ups, it's a case of car after car carrying just the driver. To part the driver from his beloved car you have to offer him something better and that's part of the job of the transportation planner.

Under terms of the official regional plan adopted two years ago, the regional board assumed responsibility for co-ordinating development of a transportation network over the next two decades which would link in a sensible way the seven municipalities and seven electoral areas from Sooke to the Gulf Islands.

But Langley says emphatically: "We don't want to go it alone." The region wants to initiate and co-ordinate, working with funicipal and provincial government as partners.

There's a forecasting feature to the job, he says, trying to calculate where streams of traffic are going to build into rivers in future and which way they'll want to flow.

Looking at the Saanich Peninsula, for example, and the growth restrictions the regional plan puts on it, it's probably safe to say there won't be enough people out there to make a light rail transit system feasible.

On the other hand, Langley argued before a recent hearing of the Canadian Transport Commission in Victoria that the Canadian National rail spur which winds unused but not abandoned through Colwood and Langford and further west should be held in reserve.

He sees it as a valuable option, possibly a public transit corridor in future if light rail transportation there could serve enough customers at reasonable cost.

But don't look for a "go train" to whiz you from Triangle Mountain to the Legislative Buildings and back next year. Buses, and more buses, appear the most practical answer in the nex next few years.

Wityh the biggest population growth slated for Colwood and Langford, producing a transportation plan within that area along with solving the already existing problems getting in and out are occupying Langley.

He's deeper into problems there because in electoral areas the region takes on the local planning job.

The off-again-on-again widening of the Trans-Canada Highway between the Thetis overpass and Douglas Street is only one part of the answer. Also being considered is possible improvement of the Island Highway. But if this is done, how will increased traffic affect inner urban areas, like Esquimalt for example? That's part of the question being examined, Langley says.

With commuter traffic trapped in a corridor such as the Trans-Canada Highway, there are ways of making the bus more attractive than the car. One way being studied is a priority lane for buses, possibly also for cars which are part of car-pools.

Wouldn't that be hard to police? It can be something as simple as a lane for buses and cars carrying at least three people, he says.

For car pools to work, a concentration of users and fairly long distances are needed and perhaps the civil servant population commuting from the western sector would provide that.

Another incentive for them, being tried in Seattle and Vancouver, is preferential parking rate at the downtown end.

Langley says car pools of this sort really need some kind of agency which brings would-be drivers and passengers together. If there are enough people involved it can even be done by computer.

Such co-operative transportation developments also take education, he says. Perhaps his best educating weapon will prove to be gasoline prices which go up and up.

Appeal Funds Sought

Funds to appeal prison sentences given two Esquimalt-based servicemen are being sought by a committee of military and civilian personnel.

Cpl. Robert Ganner, 32, was sentenced to four years and Cpl. Michael Dalrymple, 30, to one year following their courts martial convictions on charges of theft, wrongful possession of public property, fraud and offences to good order and discipline.

Both men were also dismissed from the service.

Charges were laid in connection with the administration of Club 44, the junior ranks mess at CFB Esquimalt, between October, 1973, and May, 1976.

Following a meeting of the appeal fund committee Tuesday night, a spokesman said Ganner, as former mess president, was particularly well thought of and had put in countless hours of effort on behalf of the mess.

The committee intends to send 1,000 letters to servicemen across Canada and overseas seeking contributions to the fund which it is hoped will amount to $3,000-$5,000.

Trustee for the fund is the John Howard Society, to which contributions may be sent at 620 View Street, Victoria.

An in-service review of the jail sentences is taking place, but civil counsel may be necessary if the cases proceed to a formal court martial appeal board.

'Replacement-Only' Capture Urged for B.C. Killer Whales

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

If any killer whales are allowed to be captured off British Columbia during the next three to five years, it should only be to replace those dying in Canadian aquariums, says Dr. Michael Bigg of Nanaimo.

Bigg, a marine biologist at the federal fisheries' biological station at Departure Bay, makes the recommendation in a report after a four-year study and census-taking of whales in B.C. and Washington waters.

The only killer whales in captivity in Canada are Sealand of the Pacific's Haida, in Oak Bay the Vancouver Public Aquarium's two killer whales and another three at the Marineland and Game Farm in Ontario.

In his report, Bigg emphasizes that another three to five years is needed to assess whether cropping has had any serious effect on the growth of pods (whale families).

"Then we will be able to say whether the cropping during the late 1960s or early 1970s depleted them very much," Bigg said in an interview. It's not very likely, based on the harvesting, that they have decreased potentially."

A fisheries operations spokesman in Vancouver said Bigg hasn't presented his recommendation for Ottawa approval.

"We would then look at them to see how enforceable they are," the spokesman said.

If approved, Bigg's recommendation to allow only replacement cropping could cause disagreement over jurisdiction between hte federal and provincial governments.

In October, 1975, the provincial government amended its Wildlife Act, requiring netters to apply for provincial permission to capture killer whales. The intent of the legislation was to clamp a moratorium on captures until the extent of the whale population is established.

"It has never been challenged by federal government, but the provincial governments do not have jurisdiction over marine mammals," the federal fisheries spokesman said.

He said if replacement cropping is approved Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc would have to decide whether to challenge the jurisdiction.

The state of Washington issued two permits for captures in 1975, one to Sea World of San Diego and the other, for 10 animals of either sex or any size, for experimental purposes by the University of Washington.

Sea World, however, is not allowed to catch killer whales in Washington waters now. Captures are permitted by Sea World in Denmark, Japan, Mexico, Norway, Britain and Mexico, according to Bigg.

"It is important that the number and identity of pods which frequent the Puget Sound be established with more certainty," Bigg said.

The National Marine Fisheries Service in Seattle will soon start a photographic census similar to the one headed by Bigg.

Identifying marks on dorsal fins and saddle patches were photographed by Bigg and his team, enabling them to trace movements and sizes of various pods.

Pod movements, Bigg said, indicate two community territories off eastern Vancouver Island with a boundary across the Strait of Georgia although individual pods do not have exclusive territories.

In the Straits of Georgia and Juan de Fuca, 11 pods, totalling 115 whales, were identified. Of these, four pods, totalling 65 to 70 individuals, were residents. The remaining seven pods, totalling almost 50 whales, were transients.

Saanich Vandals Tracked

A Sidney RCMP constable's memory in one case and "good old-fashioned footwork" in another has led to the apprehension of six teenagers blamed for recent school vandalism.

The children, 12 to 14 years old, have admitted break-ins and vandalism at McTavish, Sansbury and Deep Cove Elementary schools.

RCMP said one constable remembered doing a routine check on a youth Friday night and pursued the matter which led to confessions from at least three youths to the break-ins at McTavish and Sansbury.

Police "footwork" led to the apprehension of three more teenagers in connection with the Deep Cove incident, a police spokesman said.

TARASOFF UP AGAIN

The first declared candidate for Victoria's Nov. 20 civic election is a woman who has already made three attempts for an aldermanic seat on city council.

Ann Tarasoff, a seamstress and president of the Capital Region Tenants Association, said Tuesday she will run again because she still believes "ordinary citizens' need to be represented on what has been a largely business-oriented council.

She said she hopes to receive the endorsement of the Victoria Labor Council.

With less than two weeks remaining before nominations close Oct. 25 for the four vacant seats, only one of the incumbents — Ald. Bob Ellis — has indicated he will definitely seek re-election.

The other three are. Ald. John Hayes, who was successful in last year's by-election and has served only one year, Ald. Murray Glazier and five-year veteran Ald. Alf Hood.

There has been speculation that Hood might retir this year, but he said today he is "still mulling it over."

Gallery Singers Saturday

The Gallery Singers of Vancouver will give a concert at Christ Church Cathedral on Saturday at 3:30 p.m.

The choir of 22 singers, conducted by Frederick Carter, the organist and choir master of St. Johns, Shaughnessy, in Vancouver, last visited Victoria three years ago.

The Gallery Singers were formed in 1968 and have toured England twice. Last year they gave concerts in Kelowna, Penticton and White Rock, in addition to several concerts in Vancouver, both alone and in conjunction with the Vancouver Symphony, and in the four choirs festival. The choir has made two records, and has won the Lincoln Trophy, the symbol of choral supremacy in Canadian festivals.

Entrance is free, and a collection will be taken.

FLU SHOT DEATHS PROBE PUSHED

NEW MYSTERY DISEASE HITS

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Pennsylvania health officials, still baffled by the legionnaires' disease that killed 29 persons, have another mystery illness on their hands.

The latest illness has forced the closing of the Essex International Co. electronics firm in Kittanning; where 52 out of 300 workers were stricken with an ailment that remains undiagnosed.

Health officials said Essex workers stricken complained of headaches, chest pain, light-headedness ,and difficulty in swallowing.

Twelve employees reported sick about 13 days ago. Plant officials, believing the sickness might be due to the ventilation, made adjustments to the system.

Last Thursday 40 more became ill, 37 of which were treated at Armstrong County Hospital and three were detained.

"There were about four who got sick," said Shelba Koleck, president of United Steelworkers Local 8259 in Kittanning, about the outbreak. "By the time everybody became aware that they had gotten sick, they told us to go outside to the parking lot and stay there.

"It was a good idea they did, because like every 10 minutes somebody else would be passing out," she said. "It shook everybody up. They had low pulses and felt faint all over. We won't go back to work until a cause is found."

In Philadelphia, city health officials said Tuesday there still was no clue as to the cause of the illness that swept through a state American Legion convention last July, killing 29 persons and sickening 151.

"There isn't anything new," said Dr. Lewis Polk, acting city health commissioner. "We really can't find a cure if we don't know what we're looking for, and we don't have a cause yet."

Associated Press

Medical investigators pressed the hunt today for information about elderly persons in half a dozen states who died recently after getting swine flu shots. Three deaths in the Pittsburgh area on Tuesday led eight states to suspend the inoculation program temporarily.

Federal and state health officials stressed that there was no link between the vaccinations and the deaths — 10 in all. They noted that all the victims were elderly — one was 94 — and most had a history of heart trouble.

Most of the states where the swine flu vaccination program was under way continued the inoculations, although five states stopped using vaccine from the same lot as that incolved in the Pittsburgh cases.

Authorities generally said the only after-shot reactions they had heard about were the expected ones: sore arms.

Zaire Sickness Toll Now 253

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The death toll resulting from a mystery fever sweeping northern Zaire in central Africa has reached 253, the Belgian foriegn ministry announced today.

A ministry spokesman said the new figure was reported by the doctor in charge of a Belgian medical mission in the stricken area. Zaire is the former Begian Congo and a Belgian priest and three nuns are among the victims of the fever epidemic.

The ministry spokesman said no further cases have been reported since Oct. 7, raising hopes that the outbreak is under control. He said there was "no foundation" for earlier press reports that the death toll was between 800 and 1,000.

Tropical fever experts in the United States, Britain, France and Belgium have been trying to identify the fever since it broke out this summer. Last week the institute of tropical medicine in Antwerp announced it had succeeded in isolating the virus, but had not identified it.

Throne Speech 'Oozed Cynicism'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — "Oozing with political cynicism" and a "nice sounding document" with no concrete plans to cope with major problems, was the way oppositon leaders described the speech from the Throne Tuesday.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, pointed out there are 750,000 unemployed in Canada but there was "nothing in the speech oozing with cynicism to indicate the government was prepared to take firm measures to reduce the unemployment."

Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark described it as a "nice sounding document which gives no indication of concrete actions the government is prepared to take to meet the major problems now confronting the country." He said there was no suggestion as to when the present controls program would be lifted and the country would move into a post-control period.

Broadbent accused the Liberal government of writing its throne speech with one eye on the latest Gallup polls.

The unemployment problem he estimated, costs the Canadian economy $7 billion a year, but there was nothing in the speech to indicate that the administration was going to make serious attempts to deal with the problem.

Allan McKinnon, Conservative MP for Victoria said the federal government has failed to outline any direction for handling Canada's economic problems.

He said in one interview from Ottawa the throne speech 'amounted to the Liberals throwing up their hands and saying they don't know what to do about the economy."

He said this was evident in one section of the speech were the government said it favored a middle position between the extremes of government interference in the free enterprise and adopting a hands-off attitude.

McKinnon said this was a "baffling" position in light of recent moves by the Liberal government and appeared to indicate it didn't know which position ot take so decided to sit on the fence.

The Conservative MP said it appeared from the speech that the government was planning to make housewives eligible for the Canada pension, something he said the Conservative party has been pushing for years.

A number of Canadian businessmen said they were pleased with the speech, but many labor leaders expressed dismay that it failed to put more emphasis on solving Canada's problems.

John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, said there were strong indications that the federal government plans to interfere less in the economy of the future.

He said his group felt the speech was without threat and that this might have been an attempt by government to relieve anxiety among those who think the government is anti-business.

Sam Hughes, executive director of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said the speech appeared to favor much of what the chamber has been advocating.

In Halifax, Paul Lepage, president of the New Brunswick Federation of Labor, said he did not know what was meant by a reference in the speech to better mechanisms for settling labor disputes.

The 'Us and Them' Show

Community Plan Rejected By Residents as Too Vague

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Apparently no one disliked the artists' sketches.

But that was about the only aspect of Victoria's draft official community plan that escaped strong criticism Tuesday night, at a three-hour public hearing where the collective voice of the neighborhoods was heard above all others.

The message it carried was unmistakable:

—That those who live in the inner-city neighborhoods, where the roar of the bulldozers has been and still is heard, reject the plan as too vague and general a document to provide any real protection against the threat of demolition and redevelopment;

—And that residents demand the right to be consulted, to be equal partners with the city administration in determining their future.

Inevitably, although some individual speakers deplored the trend, the meeting typified the confrontation atmosphere that has developed in recent months between neighborhood associations and City Hall.

To some extent this "us and them" situation was emphasized (rather than softened, as was obviously the intent) by a new seating arrangement in which the nine council members sat squarely facing the audience of about 150 people, instead of coyly turning their backs.

Mayor Mike Young allowed a wide range of discussion — often on items not even remotely connected with planning — but became nettled late in the meeting when one community representative accused council of consistently adopting a pro-developer attitude.

Among specific condemnations of the plan, which has been in preparation for two years and which council is required to submit to the Capital Regional Board by late November:

—It was released only a month ago, allowing community groups insufficient time to respond.

—That the same groups were denied any say in its preparation.

—Its maps are too small to have any usefulness — one resident defied anyone to make sense of them, even with a magnifying glass — and some of its language ambiguous and vague.

—The document omits any reference to specific policies for individual neighborhoods, because a special supplement dealing with this subject will not form part of the plan proper.

Several neighborhood spokesmen urged council to scrap or drastically modify the existing plan, after close consultation with the various associations, and to arrange a number of additional liaison meetings.

But the mayor questioned the value of such meetings. The only commitment or undertaking he was prepared to give, he said, was that council would consider the views aired before formally submitting the plan to the regional board.

Only if major changes were contemplated would another public hearing be necessary.

Young also emphasized that no decision has been made on whether the official community plan will be registered with the provincial government.

If this procedure is adopted the plan can be changed only with provincial cabinet approval, and in his introductory remarks zoning committee chairman Ald. Alf Hood explained that council was reluctant to adopt this mechanism because it would involve abandoning council's prerogative to one or more senior levels of government.

"It would make decision making too remote from those affected," said Hood.

A five-page brief prepared by Communities United for Action, a coalition of neighborhood associations formed last June specifically to combat the rash of housing demolitions, summarized most of the complaints aired during the evening.

Noting that the draft plan was officially released only on Sept. 10, the brief stated:

"The atmosphere that has surrounded this plan has been one of secrecy — a shutting out of community participation in the actual drawing up of the plan.

"We ask, therefore, how can community residents see this process other than one that has negated real participation and replaced it by the traditional rubber stamping of professionally conceived and professionally developed plans produced in the back rooms of City Hall?"

The brief complained that the community plan leaves council's options so broad that it "perpetuates the traditional 'firefighting' approach to problem solving that has always failed to place problems within a broad perspective."

While there is some validity to the claim that all plans must be flexible, it argued, this reasoning must not be used as "an excuse to permit city council to commit itself to nothing in particular."

It claimed the city's plan will benefit downtown businessmen because it will provide them with a bigger clientele in the immediate residential areas, and it will also be a bonanza to the real estate industry.

Architect David Hambleton was one of only two speakers to support the plan as it stands.

He deplored the fact that the meeting had acquired all the trappings for the "scenario of a Shakespearean tragedy," complete with sundry villains including the city administration, realtors, developers and businessmen.

"It's time we grew up and got away from this type of confrontation meeting," he added.

No Ferries, No Mail, No Garbage Collection

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

If you want to get off Vancouver Island by B.C. Ferries Thursday, forget it.

And you will almost certainly be disappointed if you are expecting mail to be delivered or your swelling garbage cans to be emptied.

It is organized labor's day of protest against federal wage guidelines and employees in these areas have voted to stay off the job.

There will be B.C. Hydro bus service in the Greater Victoria area but there will be no service up-Island as Vancouver Island Coach Lines will be out with members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers supporting the day.

B.C. Ferries will stay tied up at the terminals because 2,400 unlicensed workers are not expected to report for work.

The one-day shutdown will also get support from the 17 construction industry unions and all major forest industry mills will be down as members of the International Woodworkers of America pledged their support.

These are the areas where the support for the day is strongest but trade union leaders are a bit jittery about just how tough the show of strength will be as there are some hesitant troops.

Most of the leaders agree with reports that about 75 per cent of B.C.'s unionized work force — more than 200,000 persons — will be off the job.

But when pressed on specifics, the leaders admit that although many of the large industrial unions have committed their support there are still a number of areas where the strength is uncertain.

For example, despite a strong call from its executive to honor the day, the 35,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees Union appear to be split on the issue.

There is also a split in Victoria in the ranks of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, one of the original supporters of the Canadian Labor Congress decision to call the national strike.

Only Local 50, covering the city's outside workers, has voted to stay off the job. Other locals have decided to boycott the day or left the decision up to their members.

Police, fire and hospital services will be maintained but there may be some delays in placing long distance telephone calls through the operator or in getting telephone information.

Schools in the area should operate normally as teachers have voted to stay on the job.

Victoria union leaders are hopeful a majority of the 18,000 members of the Victoria Labor Council will turn out for a parade and rally in front of the Legislative Buildings at noon Thursday.

One CLC spokesman said the union leaders are "a little bit on edge" about the day, the first such national strike in Canada's history.

"We've all got butterflies," he said.

The main purpose of the day is to show the federal government that the leaders have the support of rank and file members in their attack on Ottawa's economic moves.

—controls have only served to keep wages down and have had no dampening effect on prices and household costs, such as mortgage rates, energy and food prices;

—controls have killed collective bargaining because they change the terms of agreement worked out between the two parties;

—controls represent a betrayal by Prime Minister Trudeau who campaigned in the 1974 federal election against such economic restraints;

—the federal government is doing nothing to solve the problems of unemployment, lack of housing and high energy costs.

Art Kube, a CLC spokesman in Vancouver, says not only are controls not working, they are holding up any form of economic recovery.

He says he is hopeful that after Thursday Ottawa will remove the controls but added labor has already been partially successful in that it is "getting to them (the federal government) more than we have before."

'Let's Omit Gory Details'

Saanich school board is upset over the amount of pubicity the press gives vandalism at district schools.

Trustees Tuesday night complained press coverage is excessive and too detailed and tends to aggravate the problems.

Board chairman Dr. Gerry Kristianson said the incidence of vandalism seemed to rise in proportion to press coverage.

"Let's say there is vandalism at schools," vice-chairman Norma Sealey said. "But let's omit some of the gory details."

In other business, trustee Walter Tangye created a stir when he announced there was no need for the board to have sent himself, trustees Lois Walsh and Harry Tobin and superintendent Eric Lewis to a Canadian Education Association convention in Halifax last month.

"Why spend $2,000 just to provide part of an audience?" Tangye asked.

He said in light of present economic conditions it would have been enough to have had copies of reports given at the convention sent to the board members.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. On Nov. 29, 1949, a Victoria tow boat went down off Trial Island. The only survivor was a young lad who got ashore on a log. I would like to know the name of the tow boat. J.H.

A. The tragedy occurred Nov. 26, 1949. The tug was the 74-foot George McGregor, owned by the Victoria Tug Company and named for the company's founder, the late Capt. George McGregor.

Even a week or so of vacation spent at home doing all those things that always seem to need doing at this time of the year, is enough to throw you off stride.

You haven't been away long enough to have forgotten where it is you sit in the newsroom. But all those days of being so delightfully out of touch have left your mind even more hazy than usual. And so by habit you stuff pieces of paper into your typewriter . . . but alas, no words appear on them.

It was in exactly that frame of mind that I leapt from my desk Tuesday afternoon to walk the streets of our fair city as it basked in yet another of the glorious Indian Summer days we have surely earned.

And I'm glad I did.

I hadn't got too far into the downtown core when I met Hannah Matilda Robinson. And I just couldn't pass her by.

Her silver hair tied back with a scarf and wearing a warm kind of coat everyone's grandmother might wear, Hannah was chewing gum and fiddling away at the entrance to Bastion Square. One blue shoe tapped neatly in time with the tune and near it her violin case lay open to collect the coins some pedestrians tossed in.

The coins, of course — she sometimes makes $2 or $3 and on rare occasions up to $10 a day — do help supplement her old-age pension. But they aren't the real reason Hannah fiddles her way around town.

She can't play as well indoors and she can't play at all sitting down, Hannah explains. And so, because she likes people to hear her music, she'll fiddle for a while in Bastion Square perhaps or, if there's already someone there, she'll stop at one of her other favorite places.

With all that standing, Hannah can only hack it for about half an hour at a time.

"Or an hour, if I don't play too hard," she says.

And so she can easily be talked into what she calls "a wake-me-up cup of coffee" in a nearby restaurant.

With a cup in one hand and a cigarette in the other, Hannah leans across the little table and confides that she's a musical rarity and that, as far as she knows, she's in her 70s.

"I came from a very large family in the Ottawa Valley and no one paid much attention as to which years we were all born," she said. "I believe I'm in my 70s but I could go for 50." Then she adds with a chuckle: "In fact, some people say I could go for 16!"

"This was a gift I was born with," Hannah says, glancing down at her violin case. "I never had any lessons. I just picked up a fiddle one day when I was about 12 and started playing it. I became quite famous around Ottawa — everyone knew me. They would come from miles around to hear me play because not many people can just pick up a violin and play it like I did."

In her younger days, Bonnie, as she was better known as then, played the violin at concerts and dances. Often farmers at dances in Ontario and later in Saskatchewan would pass the hat around while she was playing and collect anywhere from $50 to $100 for her. Now it's nickels and dimes and a few curious looks from passers-by more used to seeing the long-haired and bearded young people play their guitars on the streets here in the summer. But she doesn't mind.

In between those two extremes of life, Hannah Matilda Robinson has fiddled her way right across Canada, playing in almost every major centre and many many minor ones. When her husband died 20 years ago, she played on, and later combined with a man to play duets in cabarets and nightclubs.

"He dragged me out," Hannah explains. "I didn't always want to go but he'd say 'Come out and share your gift with other people.' "

When her partner went broke a few years ago, he was forced to sell his old violin. As Hannah's original instrument had since been smashed in a fall from a shelf, she paid him $10 for his.

"And I've been playing it ever since."

When the coffee's all gone and she's ready for a bit more standing, Hannah goes back out to her fans. Back to the Blue Skirt Waltz, to Somewhere My Love, to Springtime in the Rockies and many more, some of which she has made up herself.

What about your family, Hannah? I asked as we parted.

Catch McGeer Name of Game

Petch wanted to convince McGeer of UVic's need for more funds to continue its building program, specifically a new music wing — cost $3.2 million — for the MacLaurin Building.

So Petch invited McGeer to lunch Tuesday.

The UVic president said he spent days drawing up plans, model flow charts and designs all geared to impress McGeer.

He wanted to show that the Universities Council which handles all financial grants to UVic, the University of B.C. and Simon Fraser wasn't really being fair.

After all, the council approved construction of the new music wing more than one-and-a-half years ago.

So where are the funds?

On the other were Petch, UVic chairman Joseph Cunliffe and buildings and finance chairman Ian Stewat.

It was a leisurely meal, said Petch, with McGeer for the most part talking about how he intends to emphasize vocational and career-oriented training facilities in the future.

The coffee arrived and Cunliffe rose to outline the manner in which the UVic presentation would be given. He'd just started when McGeer interjected.

Sorry, the minister said. He had to run. Could Cunliffe finish what he had to say in 10 minutes?

"I couldn't believe it," Petch said today. "If I'd only known beforehand. I wouldn't have sat there eating. I'd have been on the floor presenting the facts to McGeer while he dined."

McGeer gave no reason for his sudden departure but agreed to meet again with UVic officials.

When and where wasn't settled but it is doubtful it will be over lunch, one official said.

New Vote on Nov. 20 for Rec Centre

Central Saanich council voted Tuesday night to rejoin Sidney and North Saanich in building a recreation centre on the Saanich Peninsula and will seek voter approval in the Nov. 20 municipal elections.

The move comes after Central Saanich ratepayers rejected a separate recreation centre plan in a referendum last month. Earlier in September ratepayers in North Saanich and Sidney voted solidly in favor of a $1.8 million swimming pool-rink, to be built on the East Saanich Road south of McTavish.

Meanwhile, a split has appeared in the teamwork between Sidney and North Saanich mayors, who led their councils into developing and selling the centre project to ratepayers after Central Saanich opted out of the partnership earlier this year, arguing plans were too costly.

Mayor Jean Butler of Central Saanich said today her council would not have left the so-called tri-municipal project if the cost had been the present $1.8 million rather than the $3.8 million initially proposed.

She said her council had offered what it considered a responsible plan last month but voters said no, some because they wanted no increase in property taxes and others because they wanted Central Saanich in on a tri-municipal partnership.

As part of municipal election balloting, Central Saanich ratepayers will be asked if they favor joining the Sidney and North Saanich centre plan as it now stands, sharing the cost and use of the centre.

Mrs. Butler said the projected costs of joining have yet to be worked out in detail but they will be about the same as they would have been for the separate Central Saanich centre, that is, about a 6 per cent increase on the property tax bill.

The Capital Region Board will be asked later today to approve the Central Saanich re-entry. The board is handling the organizing of the project for Sidney and North Saanich.

The Sidney-North Saanich referendum was made contingent on the provincial government contributing a one-third grant, about $600,000, and Recreation Minister Grace McCarthy has since indicated there are no more funds available for recreation projects this year.

Without a grant Sidney and North Saanich have voter approval to spend only $1,240,000 and the split which has developed between their mayors concerns how quickly the project should be started and how much should be built.

Mayor Paul Grieve of North Saanich said today he doesn't think the project will get any grant but it would be $300,000 at most.

A stripped-down version of the recreation centre, with pool and rink functioning but other parts just roughed in, would drop the cost to $1,380,000 and North Saanich has asked the municipal affairs department if it would approve going ahead with that.

His council will meet Thursday morning to consider approving an immediate start on such a bare-bones centre.

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said today McCarthy should be given a chance to answer a plea both mayors made to her last week. The contract price on the centre is good to the end of November.

Irked at the moves North Saanich has made on its own, Malcolm said it appears the stripped-down centre would give ratepayers less while they paid more.

No Touts, Please; For Winners Only

It's that time of the year again.

The thoroughbreds will be off and running at Sandown, near Sidney, beginning Saturday for a total of 16 days. And, if you are planning on taking a flyer, remember this: never wager more than you can afford to lose.

That's today's first tip in WALKER'S ANNUAL Handy Hints to Horseplayers edition and another of the commandments to keep in mind is: never bet a lot to win a little. You may get burned. But good!

There's an old saying connected with the Sport of Kings which says: You can beat a race but you can't beat the races. That is the edge that every punter is looking for. You have to pick your spots. You shouldn't bet every race. It's a wise man who knows when to bet and when to watch.

So the horses are here for only a short time and you want to have some fun. Why not?

Well, first if you must handicap a race, the Daily Racing Form is a must purchase. Learn to read it and to analyze what you see in print. And the first thing then to do is to judge a horse's current form; not last May's, nor one race in August, but what has happened in the last month.

Is there a consistency to its form? Is there any sign of improvement? Does it have a high percentage of times in the money? Has it been running above it sclass in losing races? Does it show a preference for an off track? A consistent horse is a dangerous horse even though it may not win. That brings up another point. Just because a horse is the odds-on favorite with the public does not necessarily mean that horse is the best horse in the race. It is just that the public, through its wagering, has made it the choice.

In handicap races, always look first to the horse carrying the most weight. That horse is carrying that weight because the racing secretary thinks it merited the honor; and the racing secretary knows more than most punters, or is supposed to.

But remember too, that the weight is based on what the horse has done, not what he might do; and that he has been weighted in relation to the ability of every other horse in the race. In theory, what the racing secretary has tried to do is to handicap the race so that every horse will hit the wire at the same time.

It doesn't always work that way, of course, because nobody knows how a particular horse is feeling on any particular day; and then maybe a horse could be the victim of another jockey's strategy.

Some horses like to run on the front end but, if pressed by too fast a pace, they chuck it in the stretch. Then beware the come-from-behinder. Which one? That's for you to decide?

So, you've got a good thing going. But just how good is it? This comes under that original heading of never bet a lot to win a little. Punters who insist on wagering on horses that look as if they cannot lose, and are sent off at very short odds, are courting disaster.

Don't take my word alone for it. This advice is contained in a helpful paperback Guide to Sports Betting (and if you read the book you may never bet at all) and the perfect illustration is of a well-known bettor in the eastern U.S.

It seems this gambler went to Pimlico one day to wager $10,000 on a filly named Marion Bender to win. However, Marion Bender, who was going for her eighth straight win against the same kind of horses she had been beating regularly, was such a short-priced favorite there was the chance she would pay only $2.20 for each $2 wagered. By the same token, the minimum payment for a $2 bet is $2.10 and Mr. Moneybags figured he could get approximately the same profit by doubling his bet and betting Marion Bender to show. Now all she had to do was finish first, second or third, and he would collect $1,000 profit. Simple, and with the edge he was looking for too.

Well, she didn't. Marion Bender ran out of the money and Mr. Big wasn't so flush. The "sure thing" wasn't.

So, so much for form, which is the only thing a handicapper has to go on.

Have fun . . . And bring money!

HAPPINESS is being a member of the Cincinnati Reds. Shortstop Dave Concepcion pats third-baseman Pete Rose on back after Reds came from behind 6-4, ninth-inning deficit to defeat Philadelphia Phillies 7-6, Tuesday, and sweep best-of-five National League championship series in three straight. Red Lightning Kayos Phillies

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds are like bottled lightning. You never know where or when they'll strike.

Manager Sparky Anderson's Reds looked like a beaten team in the ninth inning of Tuesday's third game in the National League playoff game against Philadelphia Phillies.

The Phillies led 6-4, and used ace reliever Ron Reed to assure their first victory in the series and stave off elimination.

It appeared that the Reds' fourth National League pennant clinching in six years would have to wait at least one more day.

But as the Phillies' shortstop, Larry Bowa, would say later, the Reds never quit. First, George Foster and Johnny Bench hit consecutive homers off Reed.

Then they bled the Phillies for the winning run in a 7-6 pennant clincher, taking the best-of-five series in the three-game minimum.

Pinch-hitter Ed Armbrister sacrificed the runners to second and third, and Pete Rose was intentionally walked. Then Ken Griffey, who lost the league batting title on the final day of the season, topped a ball toward first. The ball ticked off first baseman Bobby Tolan's glove and Concepcion streaked home.

After a single, a walk, a sacrifice, a walk and an infield topper, the Phillies were dead.

Despite his disappointment, Bowa paid tribute to the Reds and predicted they'd blow out the American League champions in the World Series starting Saturday in Cincinnati.

"There was no luck involved," said Bowa. "They took advantage of every mistake we made."

The champagne still was pouring in the Reds' clubhouse when Anderson turned his thoughts to the World Series. He announced that left-hander Don Gullett would start for the Reds regardless of which team won the American League pennant, New York Yankees or Kansas City Royals.

The Phillies started Jim Kaat against the Reds, and he blanked them on one hit through six innings. The Phillies, meanwhile, built a 3-0 lead off Cincinnati starter Gary Nolan and reliever Manny Sarmiento.

Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski hit successive doubles for a fourth-inning run. Bowa walked, Kaat sacrificed, Garry Maddox ripped a one-out double scoring Bowa, and Schmidt doubled home Maddox in the seventh.

Tony Perez singled for one run and Foster hit a sacrifice fly for the second. Bench walked, and after Concepcion popped out, Geronimo hit a fly into short left field that Tolan lost for a triple that sent home two more runs.

The Phillies, however, came back with two runs in the eighth off ace Reds' reliever Rawly Eastwick. Jay Johnstone, who was 7-for-9 in the playoffs for a .778 average, doubled with one out. Bob Boone walked. Bowa doubled to left for one run and Dave Cash sent the other in with a sacrifice fly.

Philadelphia picked up a run in the ninth when Jerry Martin reached first on an error by Rose, and Johnstone tripled. Then the Reds' lightning struck and it was all over.

Nettles Is 'Mr. Clutch' For Yankees

By The Associated Press

Third baseman Graig Nettles of New York Yankees is proving once again that there is more to baseball than batting averages.

Nettles, who never hits for much of an average, is making the plays that have the Yankees one game from a berth in the World Series.

He has been a virtual vacuum cleaner at third base and Tuesday night delivered a clutch single to send home the winning run in the Yankees' 5-1 win over the Royals.

George Brett, with a lofty batting average, is still hitting, but in Tuesday's game he let a ball hit by Lou Piniella get past him for a double that launched a New York comeback from a 3-0 deficit.

The win gave the Yankees a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series, putting them into a position to capture the league title here this afternoon.

Brett has six hits in 10 playoff appearances, but his manager has harsh words for his all-round play.

"The Yankee third baseman has played better than mine in this series," said Whitey Herzog grimly, who agrees with Brett that he should have stopped Piniella's double.

Two innings later, New York overtook the Royals, rallying for three runs as Herzog paraded four relief pitchers to the mound, trying to stop them. Thurman Munson and Elliott Maddox had key doubles in the comeback inning but it was a ringing single by Nettles that delivered the go-ahead run.

When Brett, whose .333 batting average led the league this year, made two costly errors in the series opener, he admitted his limitations.

"I never said I was good fielder," he said. "I'm a good hitter."

Nettles batted .254 during the regular season but led the American League in home runs with 32—half as many as the entire Kansas City club collected.

Anderson, Bannerman Spark Cougar Victory

SASKATOON — Gregg Anderson showed why he is the leading scorer in the Western Canada Hockey League and Murray Bannerman was a standout in goal Tuesday night as Victoria Cougars edged Saskatoon Blades 3-2 in the 10th game of an 11-game road trip.

Anderson, who now has 25 points, scored his 11th goal of the season with less than six minutes remaining to snap a 2-2 deadlock.

He deflected rookie Gary Lupul's centring pass into the net and the goal proved to be the winner as Cougars picked up their sixth victory of the season to take a four-point lead atop the Western Division.

Bannerman played a big part in the win by blocking 33 shots in comparison to 19 saves by Saskatoon netminder Dave Parro. He managed to rob hardshooting winter Bruce Hamilton three times, including a late save on a shot that could have given Blades a tie.

Hamilton and Darryl Erickson scored for Saskatoon in the second period.

In the only other game Tuesday, Brandon Wheat Kings extended an unbeaten string to eight games with a 5-3 victory over Kamloops Chiefs.

Milliken Retains Winning Touch

Milliken scored a one-under-par 71 to grab a seven-up lead and cruised to an easy 11 and 10 victory over Allen in the scheduled 36-hole Gorge final.

Milliken thus joins Gord Rands of Uplands, Marty Richards of Glen Meadows and Carl Schwantje of Victoria as 1976 club champions already declared.

Schwantje retained Oak Bay's title Sunday with an equally-easy 9 and 8 victory over Bill McPherson. Schwantje was even par for the 28 holes played.

Champions at the district's two remaining 18-hole courses will be decided this weekend.

Dan McClintock moved into Cedar Hill's final against defending champion Brian Gandy by defeating Bill Coupar 3 and 2. Gandy defeated Tony Ritchie in the semi-finals the previous weekend. Cedar Hill's final is scheduled for Sunday.

Richard Maslowski, Bruce Pelmore, Don Wilson and Joe Evans, remain in contention at Colwood. They'll play the semi-finals Saturday and the 36-hole final is scheduled for Sunday.

Saanich Tramples Islanders

The win moved the Braves into a tie for first place with Juan de Fuca King John Gulls.

Murray McLaran and Scott Connors led the rout with four goals each and Ed Beauchemin added three markers.

In other weekend games, Juan de Fuca topped Islanders 13-1, Lake Cowichan downed Victoria Rays 9-5, Esquimalt defeated Victoria 5-2, and Oak Bay topped Gulls, 6-4.

REJOINS DODGERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maury Wills, an expert at base running and stealing, has rejoined Los Angeles Dodgers as a full-time instructor with the National Baseball League team.

Matthews Wins Fourth Straight

Cheryl Matthews won her fourth straight race to lead Esquimalt to girl's team laurels and Doug Moffat won to pace Claremont to the boys' team crown Monday in the fourth race of the Greater Victoria High School Cross Country League at Thetis Lake Park.

The girls' race was over 3,100 metres while the boys competed over 6,000 metres.

Esquimalt finished the girls' competition with 24 points under the reverse-scoring system and was followed by Claremont (53), Mt. Douglas (108) and Victoria (111).

Claremont topped the boys' race with 34 and was followed by Esquimalt (65), Victoria (89), Mt. Douglas (125), Parkland (133), Oak Bay (160), Belmont (186) and St. Michaels (281).

THREE CLUBS TO MISS VOLLEYABLL POSITIONS

Two sessions of preliminary games will help decide which teams will be competing this season in the Victoria Senior "B" Volleyball League.

With 12 clubs bidding for positions, officials of the 10-year-old circuit will wait until completion of preliminary play before deciding on a nine-team roster.

First of the sessions at Naden Gymnasium at CFB Esquimalt on Admirals Road is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday. The second is slated Thursday, Oct. 21. Rules will be reviewed for players and spectators during the sessions.

League play this season is scheduled every Thursday at Naden, from 7 until 10:30 p.m., with no admission charges for spectators.

Chemainus Shares Lead in Big Six

Chemainus Blues tripped Victoria Maple Leafs 8-5 Tuesday to move into a tie for first place in the South Island Big Six Hockey League with Western Homes Buckaroos.

Alan Parr and Brian Wilson scored two goals each to spark Blues while single tallies were contributed by Dave Griff, Dana Lawrie, Martin Tiefert and Daryl Parrot. Bob Martin (3), Les Bergman and Dave Wilson scored the Maple Leaf goals.

Cooke Sued For Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Canadian-born sports promoter Jack Kent Cooke has been sued for divorce by his wife of 42 years.

Mrs. Barbara Cooke filed the Superior Court petition Tuesday, citing irreconcilable differences.

Cooke, 63, and his wife, 59, were married in Toronto in 1934 and were separated last July 2.

Mrs. Cooke's petition for community property estimated her husband's worth at about $100 million but said the exact amount was not known.

Allen Defends Philadelphia Players

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — General Manager Keith Allen of Philadelphia Flyers came back yith a verbal check after former Flyer Dave Schultz took a run at his former teammates.

"I am amazed that Davey would come up with stuff like this," Allen said Tuesday in response to comments by Schultz that the National Hockey League team uses "disgraceful" tactics on the ice.

"I can't really fathom what he's trying to do," Allen added. "I'm a little surprised by the statements he's made."

Schultz, traded to Los Angeles Kings before the season, was critical of the Flyers in an interview in Toronto.

"I look at some of the wild things that happened when I played for the Flyers and I can't help but blame them for starting a lot of trouble," Schultz said.

Schultz said: "They would do anything to accomplish their goals — and often did. Coach Freddie Thero just stood back and enjoyed it . . . some of the things the Flyers have done are disgraceful."

However, Allen said that "I've said so many times, we play a physical game.

"We've never denied that. But we've got a lot of skilled hockey players, too. Coach Shero has said he never sent a man out to get another man and he's offered to take a lie detector test on that."

Schultz played Sunday in the Spectrum for the first time in a visiting team's uniform. He was ejected from the game after a bench-clearing brawl.

"When Schultz first came on the ice, it was obvious he tried to get something going." Allen said. "There's no way the Flyers started any of this.

"Maybe he felt that if he was here his role was always to fight, and by being here it wouldn't change."

All Island Ski Facilities Gearing Up for Season

All three ski areas on Vancouver Island — Mt. Arrowsmith, Forbidden Plateau and Green Mountain — had minor facelifts during the summer.

Arrowsmith, the mountain that dominates the eastern skyline at Port Alberni, has added four more downhill runs to bring the total number to 14 serviced by the existing double chair lift.

In addition, newly-appointed manager Tony Kiessling says the area has added a six-mile-long cross-country trail, which starts and finishes at the day lodge.

The access road, which starts at the summit of the Alberni-Parksville highway, has been upgraded and many of the runs have been cleaned up considerably.

Kiessling also expressed hopes the area could arrange for construction of the 3,000-foot long (800 feet vertical) chair to near the top of Cokely Ridge next summer — a move that would open up a vast new area of the mountain.

Shopping early can save money at Arrowsmith. Season tickets will be available at a 10-per-cent discount until Oct. 31 and at a 5-per-cent discount from Nov. 1-15. Further information may be obtained by telephoning 723-7512 or visiting the office at 3290 Third Avenue in Port Alberni.

Forbidden Plateau, reached by making a left turn just before the highway bridge in Courtenay, has added several cross-country trails to cater to the growing number of people taking to this sport and has cleaned up many of the existing downhill runs.

During the summer, engineering and clearing for a new chair on Trickle Creek was completed and the lift should be built next summer.

Another snow packer has been added to the three in use last season, bringing a promise of more packed runs in the upcoming season.

Further information on the area may be obtained by telephoning 334-4744 or by writing: Forbidden Plateau Lifts, 2050 Cliffe Avenue, Courtenay, B.C., V9N 2L3.

Green Mountain will be trying yet another access route during the winter with construction of a new linkup between the parking lot and the old route to the top lodge. It should eliminate many of the switchbacks that have made access to the area difficult.

In addition to the usual cleanup work on existing runs, workers on Green have widened the excellent run that starts at the top of the upper T-bar and ends in the meadow above the parking lot. A few of the thrills of negotiating right-angle turns at high speed will be missing — but it'll be a little safer.

Further information on the area may be obtained by telephoning Pres Storey in Victoria at 382-9082 or Grace Punnett in Duncan at 746-7932.

Debbie Scott Takes Cross Country Title

Debbie Quatier of Seattle was second and Maureen Crowley of Simon Fraser University finished third.

Sharon Young of Esquimalt Athletics placed 11th in the field of about 100 and UVic finished seventh out of 13 teams.

In the 5.5-mile men's race, Brian Blamey of UVic finished 13th with a time of 27:40, only 41 seconds behind winner Bill Stolp of the University of Washington.

Murdoch Nets Five Goals To Tie 29-Year NHL Mark

The Canadian Press

Merritt Centennials, Flin Flon Bombers or Minnesota North Stars—they're all the same to Don Murdoch.

Rookies jumping all the way from junior hockey to the National Hockey League are expected to suffer a period of adjustment but the goals are coming as easily as ever for the Murdoch, 19.

The right winger tied an NHL record Tuesday night by scoring five times against Minnesota goaltender Gary Smith to help New York Rangers blitz the North Stars 10-5.

He tied the NHL mark for goals in a game by a rookie, established by Howie Meeker for Toronto Maple Leafs in 1947, and set a club record with his spree.

In the World Hockey Association, Quebec Nordiques scored a 6-4 victory over San Diego Mariners and Birmingham Bulls topped Calgary Cowboys 6-2.

Tuesday's goals gave Murdoch eight for his first four NHL games, but seven of them were scored against the Stars.

Scoring goals is nothing new for the Cranbrook, B.C., native. He graduated from playing against Merritt for Vernon of the British Columbia Junior League to facing Flin Flon for Medicine Hat Tigers of the Western Canada Hockey League. In two years at Medicine Hat he scored 170 goals, 88 of them last season.

"I had a couple of four-goal games in juniors but never five," he said. "I figure I have a pretty good shot—not that hard, but accurate."

Glenn Resch faced 21 shots in recording his second shutout for the Islanders, who have allowed only one goal and won their first three games of the season.

Bob Nystrom scored two goals, including the first of a team-record three goals within a 53-second span in the second period. Ed Westfall and Jean Potvin completed the record spree.

Four goals in the second period gave the Canadiens their win over the Red Wings, who haven't beaten them since March 20, 1974. Guy Lafleur, Rick Chartraw, Bob Gainey and Yvon Lambert beat Detroit goalie Ed Giacomin in the middle period.

The Nordiques also have a perfect record for three starts after their win over the Mariners.

The Nordiques fought back from a 4-1 deficit late in the first period with Buddy Cloutier's first goal at 18:26, and went on to score four more—one in the second, and three in the third—without any reply from the Mariners.

Quebec's other scorers were Christian Bordeleau, with two goals and an assist, Ron Fitchner, Paulin Bordeleau and Richard Grenier. Norm Ferguson scored two goals for the Mariners.

Lomas Gives Vikes Punch

Dan Lomas was much of the difference Tuesday night as University of Victoria Vikings defeated Oak Bay 5-0 in a Vancouver Island Soccer League premier division match at Royal Athletic Park.

Lomas, who played for Portland Timbers of the North American Soccer League last season, scored two goals and set up a third.

He scored at eight minutes again at the 72-minute mark and made the play for Dave Secco's goal at 75 minutes. Doug Purich scored the fourth goal for the Vikings.

It was Vikings' first win of the season.

Meanwhile, a protest by Cosmpolitan Royals over a 3-2 victory by Gorge on Sept. 25 has been upheld and the game will be replayed at a later date. No reason was given for the protest.

Oak Bay Keeps Record Intact

Oak Bay Bays won the battle of the undefeated in the Greater Victoria Inter-High School Soccer League Tuesday with a 2-0 victory over Spectrum at Spectrum.

It was the sixth straight win of the season for Oak Bay which holds a one-point lead over Spectrum in the standings. Spectrum has had one tie and has played one game more than Oak Bay.

Harry Beck got the first goal for Oak Bay at the 15-minute mark and Ed Lowe the second on a penalty shot with 10 minutes left to play.

Esquimalt blanked Parkland 1-0, and Victoria High whipped Belmont 6-0 in other league action. Larry Nohr scored Esquimalt's goal while Doug McCaig with two, John Spadafora, Phil Holt and Dave Williams tallied for Vic High.

Dowling Connects; Mt. Doug on Top

John Dowling, a Victorian attending the University of British Columbia, retained "A" division laurels in the Victoria invitational squash tournament at the weekend by defeating Chris Burrows of Seattle 3-2 in the final Sunday at the Racquet Club.

Dowling, seeded second behind Victoria's Phil Green, took the first game 17-16 but dropped the next two 15-8 and 15-11. Following the break, Dowling changed tactics and kept Burrows on the backwall for forced errors to take the final two games, 15-11, 15-7.

Burrows, who was unseeded, knocked off Green 12-15, 15-10, 15-8, 15-7 in the semi-finals while Dowling ousted veteran Victorian Egon Kuhn 3-2 by winning the final game 15-6.

Gerry Poulton captured the "C" division title with a 3-0 win over Randy Howarth of Vancouver. Marty Taylor won the "D" division title with a decision over Victoria's Lorne Mackie. Pamela Penn won the women's "C" crown with a 3-1 victory over Vivienne Irving and Stan Heard collected the veteran's laurels with a 3-1 win over Vancouver's George Smith.

Gayle Conn and Faye Vucerevich of Lethbridge were the women's doubles winners while Kent Conn and Bill Vucerevich claimed the men's doubles crown.

as they sing the praises of your Celery Tuna Sandwiches

CELERY TUNA SANDWICH
- 1 can (10 fl. ounces) Campbell's Cream of Celery Soup
- 1 can (7 ounces) tuna, drained and flaked
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 4 slices whole wheat bread
- Lettuce

Combine ¼ cup soup, tuna, onion, and lemon juice. Spread on 2 slices of bread. Top with lettuce and remaining bread. Makes 2 sandwiches.

Mix remaining soup with equal amount of milk; heat and serve as soup with sandwiches.

CREAMY PEANUT BUTTER SOUP
- 1 can (10 fl. ounces) Campbell's Tomato Soup
- ¼ cup peanut butter (chunky or smooth)
- 1½ soup cans milk

In saucepan, gradually stir soup into peanut butter until well blended; add milk. Heat; stir occasionally. Makes about 3 cups.

Serve with grilled cheese sandwiches.

when they ask for another of your tasty Scrambled Eggburgers

SCRAMBLED EGGBURGERS
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup chopped cooked ham
- 1 can (10 fl. ounces) Campbell's Cream of Mushroom Soup
- 6 eggs, slightly beaten
- 6 buns, split and toasted
- Dash pepper

Cook green pepper and onion in butter until tender. Add ham; brown. Blend soup, eggs, and pepper; add to ham and vegetables. Cook over low heat; stir now and then until eggs are set. Serve on buns. Makes 6 servings.

Witness Says Accused Told of Murdering Two

NANAIMO (CP) — James Rodriguez Melendez described to a friend how he shot two persons in nearby Duncan a year ago, the Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

Gerald Frank was giving evidence at the trial of Rodriguez, 26, who is charged with murder in the Oct. 24, 1975, fatal shooting of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones.

Their bodies were found a month later in a dump near Duncan.

Frank testified that Rodriguez told him in Seattle a month after the shootings that he went to the house he shared with Jones and Oldfield and wore dark clothing so he would not be spotted.

He said Rodriguez told him he took some personal belongings from the house and waited in the dark with a .22-calibre rifle.

Frank testified Oldfield entered the house and suspected Rodriguez was waiting for him because a light was on. Oldfield went to a bedroom and came out with a gun and Rodriguez shot him.

The witness said Rodriguez told him that Jones attacked him with a knife and he shot her too.

Frank also said Rodriguez told him he tidied up the house and was helped by Lou Pena in disposing of the bodies.

The witness said a conflict developed when Oldfield brought Jones to live at the house originally shared by the two men.

Frank said Rodriguez told him the woman didn't help pay the rent or clean up and that she walked about the house in the nude.

He said Rodriguez complained "It's pretty bad when a woman is walking about the house naked, but she stunk so bad he couldn't get excited about it."

NO POLITICS IN BCR-UNION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Whittaker, chairman of the B.C. Rail Joint Council of Unions, says Premier Bennett has pledged there will be no political interference in running the BCR following the recent appointment of five new directors.

Whittaker said the premier made the pledge Tuesday at a meeting in Victoria with representatives of the joint council.

He said a meeting has been set for later this month with the new railway directors. He hoped long-standing labor-management problems will become a thing of the past.

Hookers' Tables Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Penthouse hostess denied Tuesday that many of the cabaret tables were "paying tables."

"That's absolutely silly," Mrs. Eleanor Harrigan told Judge William Trainor in the Penthouse morals case, now into its second month.

Operators of the Seymour Street cabaret are charged with conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution by permitting for their own gain the club to be used by prostitutes, and with conspiring to corrupt the public morals.

Crown counsel Roy Jaques suggested to Mrs. Harrigan, that she knew which of the female patrons were prostitutes and that the working girls were required to tip her for the privilege of being seated by her at tables in "prime" areas.

He termed these "paying tables;" and suggested that the expected tip from a prostitute for being seated at a table next to the cabaret stage was $5.

Cement Masons Ratify B.C. Construction Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Cement Masons Union has ratified the contract proposal which ended the second shutdown that hit the B.C. construction industry this summer.

So far, about 28 collective agreements have been ratified by the building trades, a union spokesman said Tuesday.

The previous shutdown lasted three weeks and ended Sept. 27. It started when Construction Labor Relations Association, representing 850 contractors, imposed a lockout after plumbers went on strike to back a demand for downtown parking and extra time for hot meals.

Details of the settlement have not been released but it is based on the report by industrial inquiry commissioner Jim Kinnaird which provides an increase of $1.29 an hour on wage rates that range from $9.50 to $12.19. The settlement is subject to approval by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

The first closure in the industry, which employs 40,000 workers, began at the end of June when the cement masons became embroiled in a contract dispute with CLRA. That shutdown lasted 37 days.

Rescuers Honored

VERNON (CP) — John Hackman and Robert Brown were honored Tuesday for their rescue of a fellow worker who was left unconscious and hanging upside down from his safety belt after touching a 7,200-volt power line while working at the top of a pole. They received $1,000 each and a medal and citation for bravery from the Workers Compensation Board.

Discoverer Appeals

VANCOUVER (CP) — An appeal against a judgment awarding Utah International and Utah Mines Ltd. more than $3 million in a contract suit opened in B.C. appeal court Tuesday before a three-judge panel. The original action was brought against Gordon Milbourne, discoverer of the Island Copper Mine on northern Vancouver Island, with a claim by Utah that it had overpaid Milbourne by $2.7 million. The decision upheld the claim and awarded costs and interest on the money.

Mayor Sues Radio

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Mayor Al Thompson said in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday he was not satisfied with an apology by Jim Harrison, new director of Kamloops radio station CHNL.

The mayor filed a slander suit against Harrison because of certain radio editorials presented by Harrison in late 1975 and early 1976 which dealt with Thompson and action of Kamloops city council.

No Change Seen in S.A. Sport

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Tuesday he could see no significant change in South Africa's racial policies in sport.

His remarks indicated there is no quick solution in sight to the problem of the African countries which walked out of the Olympic Games in Montreal in protest against a New Zealand rugby team touring South Africa.

Recently the South African government announced that mixed teams of black and white athletes would in future be allowed to represent the country.

But Killanin, who is in Barcelona for meetings of the IOC executive board with the international sports federations, told a press conference:

"I only know what I read in the newspapers, but I feel there is virtually no change in South Africa's policies of apartheid in sport. I have had no approach from South Africa."

South Africa was expelled from the Olympic movement six years ago because of its racial policies. That followed a report by a fact-finding commission which Killanin himself headed in South Africa. It reported complete segregation of blacks and whites in day-to-day sport at club level.

Killanin said the IOC sent questionnaires to the national Olympic committees of 31 countries asking why they did not participate in the Montreal Games.

One, Zaire, replied that its non-participation as not due to political considerations, but because of national financial priorities.

Most other countries questioned replied that they withdrew as a protest against New Zealand's recognition of South Africa at sports level.

Two African national Olympic committees, those of Kenya and Algeria, said they were acting under instructions from their governments. Another, Swaziland, wrote that the government called the team home without reference to the national Olympic committee.

The IOC executive board is talking with the federations here about possible sanctions against the countries involved in the boycott.

China Rule Urged

BARCELONA (AP) — Adrian Paulen, 74, one of Europe's veteran sports administrators, called on the International Olympic Committee Tuesday to break the deadlock on China before the next Olympic Games.

The Dutch president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF) said the solution might be a change of name by the Republic of China (Taiwan).

"My federation may ask the Taiwanese to drop the name of the Republic of China," Paulen said. "If all the federations acted together, the Taiwanese might agree."

Hard-Line Blacks Confound Kissinger

By DAVID OTTAWAY
Washington Post

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — The hard-line stand taken here this weekend by the two main factions of the African nationalist movement in Rhodesia appears to have seriously undermined the U.S. initiative to find a peaceful settlement to the Rhodesia dispute and avert an all-out race war in southern Africa.

American Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is now faced with the hard decision of whether to press the white minority Rhodesian government into attending a totally different kind of constitutional conference than the one he initially envisaged and negotiated or to allow his whole peace plan to collapse on the eve of the U.S. presidential elections.

The most militant nationalists have adroitly used the opening Kissinger has given them by wringing major concessions out of the white Rhodesian government to make their own hard-line position as the sole basis for negotiations. Indeed they have now put the American secretary, together with the British and South Africa Prime Minister John Vorster, in an embarrassing spot.

These militants have convinced the two main black nationalist groups to adopt a common stand toward any negotiations with Rhodesia's white rulers that is so hard-line it is now open to serious question whether the British-proposed constitutional conference can still take place or, if it does, has any chance of succeeding.

The terms set for the nationalst participation in a joint statement issued here Saturday reflect the growing influence of the militant military wing of the Zimbabwe (black African name for Rhodesia) nationalist movement that has come out in strong opposition to any talks except to arrange for the "unconditional surrender" of Rhodesia's white rules.

This, in effect, is what the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) and the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) have called for in demanding the "total and immediate" transfer of power to them and in rejecting the power-sharing scheme worked out by Kissinger and Vorster with the white Rhodesian leaders.

Furthermore, they have rejected direct talks with the Rhodesian white rulers and pledged to continue the armed liberation struggle until total victory. The constitutional talks, they said, must be between the African nationalist groups and the British which they regard as still the legal authority because it was the former colonial power in Rhodesia before the whites there declared unilateral independence in 1965.

The stand taken by ZANU and ZAPU appears to be largely that spelled out nine days ago by the Zimbabwe's people's army, the main guerrilla force fighting inside Rhodesia and now dominated by the ZANU faction.

CHEERING CROWD greets Joshua Nkomo, leader of the internal wing of the African National Congress in Rhodesia, as he arrives in Bulawayo, Rhodesia, after weekend visits to Dar Es Salam and Zambia.

"Under no circumstances are we prepared to share power with racists and fascists," the statement said. "We totally reject Kissinger's vicious scheme in its entirety which is aimed at sabotaging the Zimbabwean struggle and simultaneously preserving western interests in Zimbabwe.

"We reject the time limit for transition to majority rule within two years. What we demand is unconditional surrender of political power to the people of Zimbabwe now."

The military wing's hard line has enabled ZANU, presetly led by Robert Mugabe, to impose a similar line upon ZAPU President Joshua Nkomo, who only last month refused here in Dar es Salaam to sign a joint declaration similar to the one he agreed to Saturday.

It was clear from the joint declaration issued here this weekend and from Nkomo's own appearance at the press conference that their announced "patriotic front" is little more than a temporary business arrangement between the two factions, which need each other in dealing with Smith, the British and the Americans on the one hand and with other rival nationalist leaders like Bishop Abel Muzordwa and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole on the other.

The two factions, ZAPU and ZANU, recognized and accepted their "different political identities" but stated that this would not be a barrier to adopting a common approach to all issues arising from the current constitutional talks.

But not a word was said about the most contentious outstanding issue between the two groups, the reunification of their two guerrilla forces in one army. ZAPU guerrillas left the Zimbabwe people's army last spring after a series of clashes with ZANU soldiers inside joint training camps in southern Tanzania.

Since the meeting of the five frontline African presidents here early last month, ZANU and ZAPU leaders have been discussing the problem of reuniting their forces. Nkomo denied at Saturday's press conference that his guerrillas had ever left the supposedly joint army.

But Mugabe said later that ZAPU troops had not returned to the army, now virtually a ZANU operation, and that the talks had failed in this regard. He said he would report this failure to President Julius Nyerere, the frontline presidents chairman, when he and ZAPU Vice President Jason Moyo reported on the outcome of their negotiations Sunday.

Nkomo's apparent displeasure with the whole situation was reflected in his attitude at Saturday's press conference. He was tense and curt instead of his usual jocular self throughout, and when photographers asked Mugabe and him to pose together he was visibly reluctant to comply and refused to join hands as requested.

By entering the "patriotic front" with ZANU, Nkomo has lost much of the margin for separate manoeuvering he previously enjoyed and will now be under the constant pressure of ZANU and the Zimbabwe People's Army.

Meanwhile, the failure of ZANU and ZAPU to reunify their guerrilla forces inside the army bodes ill for the future of Rhodesia and is likely to make the white Rodesian government more reluctant to negotiate its "surrender" to the black nationalists. It makes more probable the kind of civil war that occurred in Angola and is certain to increase the possibility of big-power rivalry and involvement in Rhodesian affairs.

But this is a problem that awaits in the wings. Right now, the Smith government must decide whether to continue down the path of its surrender under British, American and South African guidance or take its chances in continuing the war against the most militant African nationalists while trying to work out some arrangement with the more moderate ones.

BABY FLAMINGO finds it isn't as simple as it may appear to stand on one leg like his parents do at San Diego Zoo in California. Infant is fourth flamingo hatched at the zoo this summer.

Today's Nanny Wears Jeans

OTTAWA (CP) — Behind every successful upper-class Victorian Englishman stood a prim figure in a dark uniform, her hair swept into a bun, black oxfords laced just so, his nurse or nanny in childhood.

But times have changed and today's nanny wears blue jeans, reads Cosmopolitan and jets off to remote parts of the world to watch the offspring of the not-yet rich.

Q.C. Personnel opened an Ottawa office recently to match nannies with families in the area. Since February more than 60 young women have come from the British Isles to spend a year.

Many are bona fide nannies who have passed a two-year course in child care, cooking and the arts of managing a home given by the British National Nursery Examination Board.

Mothers' helpers, girls with experience in babysitting and housekeeping, are also popular. They can be paid less than a nanny and are less particular about how much housework they must do.

The nannies command between $80 and $100 a week; mother's helpers about $64. Both receive free room and board.

With the wider range of jobs open to today's young women, nannies, especially the travelling kind, consider time off and close proximity to a city's night life more important than a family's social standing.

Some girls still are hired by prominent people, members of Parliament and embassy personnel, says Lillian Cottier, head of Q.C. Personnel's Ottawa branch. But the growing trend is for working mothers or single-parent families to hire a nanny.

Linda Line is back in Canada for her second visit as a nanny. She worked in Winnipeg six years ago and has returned for another year with hope of touring Eastern Canada.

She says that in the four months she's been here Capt. Gordon Graham and his daughters Stephanie, 4, and Andrea, 2, have become used to the occasional meal of crunchy noodles or rare chicken.

Since arriving she has made an effort to visit nearby tourist spots and meet people, but the process of assimilation seems to be working the other way.

Two-year-old Andrea has picked up an English accent and slips the odd "rather" into a sentence, which inevitably starts sister Stephanie into gales of laughter.

Other nannies report that their young charges have picked up other British turns of phrase, substituting tram for bus, pram for baby carriage and dustman for garbageman.

James family in Lethbridge and rolling eastwards

James Family Used Boxcar Where Noah Used an Ark

WINNIPEG (CP) — How do you move from one side of Canada to the other with a wife and three children, four horses, a mule, three donkeys, a cow, four dogs, six pups, two ducks, a rabbit and two cats?

Don James had the answer: You rent a CP Rail boxcar for $3,300.

"I like it, it's fun," said Don's wife, Gillian as she leaned back against a bale of hay when their boxcar home arrived here for a three-day weekend stop.

"If my house looked like this I think I'd die but . . ."

The Jameses left their previous home 25 miles south of Nelson, Monday and they hope to reach their destination in Sussex, N.B., in another six or seven days after leaving here late Sunday.

Rail was the "only conceivable way to move our family in one piece at one time to one place," said James, who rejected thoughts of selling the animals.

"They're our family . . . they come before anything else." James said neighbors called them the "crazy Jameses" when the family decided to rent the boxcar for the trip east.

By the time they arrived in Winnipeg Thursday evening they were tired, soiled and yet completely convinced they had made the right move.

The boxcar is 50 feet long and nine-feet-three-inches wide, containing stalls for the animals, space for feed and sleeping quarters built over the animals' stalls. A refrigerator and one burner stove is the only modern convenience abroad. Body heat from the animals makes the boxcar warm enough during the chilly fall nights.

The chiuldren—Simon, 12, Samantha, 11, and Stephen, 9—are enjoying the experience. They have spent hours riding in cabooses and diesel units at the invitations of the crews.

James, a native of Winnipeg, originally had planned to buy a small piece of land in British Columbia so the family could have a couple of horses for the pleasure.

But as more anomals were acquired so was the desire to operate a mixed farm and since land costs ruled out expansion in B.C., the family decided to move.

The stop in Winnipeg will be the only one long enough to give them a chance to unload and exercise the animals and clean their pens. The family also took the opportunity to visit relatives.

MANUFACTURERS ORDERED TO PAY

MONTREAL (CP) — Fourteen manufacturers of electrical products including Westinghouse Canada Ltd., Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., and CTE Sylvania Canada Ltd. have been ordered to pay $150,000 damages to a now bankrupt company.

The owners of Philippe Beaubien Co. Ltd. had sued the manufacturers charging they had refused to supply the company their products without giving a good reason. The company is bankrupt.

Mr. Justice Andre Nadeau of Quebec Superior Court ordered the manufacturers on Friday to reimburse the owners of the company saying that no supplier may refuse to do business with a merchant without a valid reason.

Philippe Beaubien Co. Ltd. was incorporated in 1953. It operated until 1967 when it went bankrupt. A short time later the company was back in business and sought merchandise from the manufacturers.

The suppliers refused to deal with the company and once again it went out of business.

The three major suppliers have been ordered to pay a total of $100,000 while the 11 smaller manufacturers will share in the payment of the remaining $50,000.

The store owners had first sued for $1,329,804 but reduced their claim to $725,000.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p.m. Friday at McCall Brothers for Victoria businessmen W. Graeme Scott of 1960 Beach Dr. who died suddenly on Sunday.

He was the owner of Scott Trading company and the former owner of Jeune Brothers.

He was born in Rossland, and was a graduate of Vic High, Victoria College and the University of B.C.

Scott served in the Royal Canadian Navy during the Second World War. He was a past president of the Victoria Gyro Club.

Constitution For Nigeria

LONDON (Reuter) — Nigeria's military rulers have made public a draft constitution under which the country would return to civilian rule, Lagos Radio reported.

The radio, monitored here, said the 50-member drafting committee recommended a strong executive president, but with checks against any abuse of his powers.

The army took power in January, 1966, in the west African country of more than 55 million people.

Arctic MD Shrugs Off Praise

EDMONTON (CP) — An Edmoton doctor credited with helping bring the epidemic rate of tuberculosis in Metis and Eskimos uder control says his efforts are not special.

"It's fine to receive recognition but, as a doctor, all I did was something that had to be done," said Dr. Otto Schaefer, head of northern medical research at Charles Camsell Hospital here.

"It was not very special," added the man who has worked with Northerners for 24 years.

He was named to the Order of Canada earlier this year in recognition of that work which began in 1952 when he arrived at the Camsell after emigrating from West Germany.

It was the first time in almost two years the residents had seen a doctor and they crowded the landing strip to welcome the party.

For the next 24 hours, the team examined and x-rayed the 140 residents.

"We worked all through the night . . . giving shots, pulling something like two dozen teeth, fitting a dozen prescriptions for glasses," he said.

The town gave a dance for the team but Dr. Schaefer, the guest of honor, didn't arrive until 5 a.m. the next day. "But we danced until the plane left at 6 or 7 a.m."

There have been many changes in the Arctic in the last 24 years, some of which are positive such as doctors regularly visiting isolated settlements like Old Crow.

Other changes have been less positive, as Dr. Schaefer told scientists at a symposium on health in the polar regions in 1974 on how native Eskimo society is crumbling.

"The basic elements of traditional Eskimo society, a tightly knit family structure and personal values, attitudes and practices shaped for a successful life in a harsh environment, are falling apart," he said.

"The older generation feels numbed, bewildered and saddened while the younger generation is idle, frustrated and rebellious."

He said the greatest problems facing the natives are social— caused by the invasion of the affluent society with more welfare and higher-paying jobs.

The social problems include alcoholism, the No. 1 health problem in the North, the breakdown of the family and suicide. Venereal disease still rages at epidemic proportions, almost 20 times the rate for the rest of Canada.

Residents in a few communities are seeking a curb on the sale of alcohol to cushion the blow of a Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

"I don't feel entitled to make any judgments on the merits of development," he said, adding anyone trying to measure the impact should look at past experiences to see how development affected the health of northern natives.

The first wave of development came in the late 19th century with the boom in whaling. Contact between whalers and natives was disastrous: native populations were destroyed by disease.

The last wave of development occurred in the mid-1950s with construction of the Distant Early Warning (DEW) radar line. The North escaped some of the ill effects partially due to some restrictions imposed by the federal government.

"For example, they tried to keep the Eskimo population away from construction camps," Dr. Schaefer said.

"I think the impact (of a pipeline) could be contained if strict standards were put on to restrict either movement of natives to camps or migrant workers to native settlements."

Dr. Schaefer feels most natives are ready to support some controls on the sale of alcohol, even if it means infringing on the rights of a minority.

Europeans Talk Trade

Three senior officials of the Commission of European Communities in Brussels will be in Victoria Thursday for meetings with Premier Bennett and other government officials.

The officers, Curt Heidenreich, Leslie Fielding and Eckehard Loerke, also plan a meeting Friday with businessmen in Vancouver. They will be discussing trade opportunities between British Columbia and European countries.

HEROIN USE UP IN U.S.

SEATTLE (AP) — There are 400,000 untreated heroin users in the U.S., most of whom are in their 20s, and hte use of hte drug has been on hte increase since 1974, says Robbie Robertson of the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

"Another 241,000 are being treated in more than 3,500 treatment agencies," said Robert, who directed one of the nation's first federally funded drug treatment programs in Taeoma.

Heroin use accounts for more than $7 billion of the $10 billion social cost of addiction in this country, said Roberton in an address to the Northwest Regional Conference on Drug Abuse and Human Services in Seattle.

No One Takes Rap For Housing Costs

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Everybody passed the buck at a town meeting called by Saanich on Tuesday to air the problems of providing affordable housing.

Government officials rapped owners of single-family homes who resist change in their neighborhoods.

They, in turn, were faulted for providing "Band-aid" financial help, inadequately publicized.

Speculators were accused of sitting on land until the costs were too excessive for development.

Government policy was blamed for encouraging this through low assessments on undeveloped land that give speculators the time to make high profits.

Developers, and there were many in the audience of 120 that attended the "town meeting," blamed the high costs on servicing and the length of time it takes to process applications through municipal hall.

The first volley came from Chris Dowling, manager of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Stating that high density is the keynote for providing people with much-needed homes, he condemned "the selfish attitude of some of the citizens who don't want high density in their area."

He said there are 2,000 acres in Saanich available for housing, adding "there is $10 million to $20 million (in provincial government funds) to deal with the servicing problem."

Later in the meeting, however, municipal planner Gil Laurenson explained there is actually only "about 300 acres" that can be used for modestly-priced housing.

Ald. David Paterson said servicing costs for housing for a population of 100,000 to 143,000 (by 1996) will be more like $41 million to $88 million.

Former Saanich alderman Les Passmore, long-time fighter for moderately priced homes, faulted the "no-change" attitude of some residents but also attacked the provincial government.

"Mr. Bell, when are you going to bring in assessments that are reasonable and equitable," he asked. "Owners of undeveloped land get away with six or seven per cent (or market values) while most people with homes are assessed 20 to 25 per cent. Why is it that undeveloped land owners are able to get away with such ridiculous assessments?"

Chris Pike of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, said homeowners were "Fords and Chevvies" who aren't concerned about the "Vegas and Pintos," who are still looking for their first home.

Ald. Maurice Johnson pointed out "the quality of life must be preserved", saying land was not like ears.

"It's a nonrenewable resource and subject to a very different set of rules."

Jack Anderson, who described himself suddenly as "a land surveyor, land owner and dirty land developer," said small homes in the Gorge area shouldn't be pulled down to make way for highrices. These should be built on undeveloped land.

"The government is responsible for the high price of land," he said. "You people (by freezing large tracts of land) have cut the supply to zero. Naturally, there's a demand."

Mayor Ed Lum said reducing the size of lots in Gordon Head had not helped the situation.

"In Gordon Head we reduced the size of lots from 8,400 to 6,000 square feet thinking this would reduce the prices. This had not happened. With all good intentions, developers put them on the market at reduced prices and the people who bought them sold them at inflated prices."

Ald. Mary Casilio said the main hurdle is high mortage rates and suggested government action to lower them.

Earlier, Laurenson said: "The crisis is an economic crisis and should be treated as such. I don't want it to be solved by higher densities and lower standards."

The meeting, called after an earlier in-camera session between Saanich and government officials, was orderly although no immediate solutions were found.

As resident Ken Fairburn put it, "This is the first meeting I've attended for many years for which there has been no pressure."

BIENNIAL BALLOTS BACKED IN SIDNEY

Sidney council has become the first in Greater Victoria to vote to hold municipal elections every two years.

Council unanimously adopted a motion Tuesday night to elect three aldermen for one-year-terms on Nov. 20 and start in biennial elections on Nov. 19, 1977.

Although Mayor Peter Malcolm said today he is delighted with the outcome, — believing it will result in a more cohesive efficient council operation—members of the Saanich school board are upset.

At a meeting of the board Tuesday night, vice-chairman Norma Sealey expressed fears that board elections may be largely ignored in years when no municipal elections are held.

Malcolm said he sympathizes but said the school board might consider changing to biennial elections also.

Youth Remanded

An 18-year-old Duncan youth has been remanded in custody to Friday after appearing in Duncan provincial court charged with murder.

Claude Blade Stymest was charged with the shooting death last Thursday of Frederick Peter Mercer, 19, of 2887 Phillips, Duncan.

Stymest was arrested shortly after the incident which occurred at about 11:30 p.m.

The remand was made to enable the accused to get counsel. The law requires that anyone charged with murder must plead not guilty, thus necessitating a preliminary hearing and trial.

Stuffed Squash Special

FOOD & nutrition

In my luggage on the plane returning home from Ottawa an acorn squash was rolling round. It was the first from my son-in-law's garden and a treasure. I wanted to make the most of it so decided to do one of my stretcher tricks . . . but with a different and nutritious addition.

Acorn and pepper squashes are abundant on the markets right now. You too may have some in your garden patch.

MAIN COURSE STUFFED SQUASH

One 5 or 5½" diameter acorn squash or two 3½" diameter
½ lb. link sausages (8 average size)
½ c. chopped onion
¼ (or ½) tsp. crumbled sage
¾ c. cracked or whole wheat or wheat flakes
1 c. orange juice
½ tsp. salt

Wash the squash or squashes and cook in boiling water to nearly cover until tender. My 5" diameter squash required 35 minutes. Lift out onto a kitchen plate and let cool a little.

While it is cooking make the stuffing. Gently brown the sausages in a frying pan about 10 minutes. Transfer to paper towel to drain. Reserve fat in pan and to it add the chopped onion and cook 2 minutes, then add cracked wheat or whole wheat or wheat flakes, sage, orange juice and salt. Stir for about 2 minutes then cover and simmer for about 18 or 20 minutes until liquid is nearly absorbed, but stir it 2 or 3 times or this will stick to bottom of pan. Cut sausages into ½" pieces and add.

To prepare squash cut it or them in halves and scoop out seedy portion. Fill with stuffing, being sure to leave a few sausage pieces on top. Bake in buttered baking dish at 375 deg.Fahr. 40 minutes.

One-half of a large squash is sufficient for two servings so cut it in half with a sharp knife. Half of a small squash would be one serving. Serve this with a generous tomato and cucumber salad.

Stuffing stretches squash into main dish meal

Storing Home Pickles

Lined up on the counter before you are your home pickled products, your work in the kitchen completed! But, before you sit back and admire your handiwork remember an important part in producing good quality pickled products still remains—proper storage.

Agriculture Canada offers these tips on successful storage:

—Pickles may be stored in sterilized glass jars or, for dills or nine-day pickles, in home canning crocks. Use only perfect jars or crocks—discard chipped or cracked ones

—Jars should be washed in warm, soapy water, then sterilized in the oven at 225 deg. F. for 10 minutes or boiled in water for 15 minutes

—Pour boiling water over lids or boil for 3 to 5 minutes, according to manufacturers' directions

—Some pickles, relishes and sauces tend to discolor if packed in unsealed jars. Glass jars specially designed for home canning are airtight and should be used when recommended in the recipe

—If pickles are left in crocks they should be well covered with the pickle mixture to prevent spoilage. A plate or wooden board cut to fit inside the crock should be placed on top of the pickles and weighted down

—Wipe the jars with a damp cloth, taking care not to disturb the screw band and label and date each jar

—Store pickled products in a cool, dark, dry place. A warm storage area may lead to flavor deterioration. Light can cause changes in the color of stored food. If the storage area cannot be kept dark, wrap each jar in paper or place in boxes to keep the light out.

—Avoid storage areas where there is a risk of freezing. This can cause jars to crack or can spoil the texture of some products

—Store pickled products upright to help eliminate the possibility of leakage

Few homes have adequate storage space for quantities larger than a year's supply and most products can be replenished each year

As a final note—after one week, recheck each jar for any signs of leakage and spoilage. If there is, the food must be thrown out. Otherwise, prepare to enjoy your handiwork in the months to come.

CHICKEN RICE TASTY CURRY

Curry powder may be decreased for a blander dish.

1 cup converted rice
2 tablespoons butter
4 teaspoons curry powder
3 tablespoons flour
2 cans each 10¾ ounces condensed chicken broth, undiluted
½ cup water
3 cups 1-inch pieces cooked skin-free chicken
¾ cup canned flaked coconut

Cook rice according to package directions. In a medium saucepan over low heat melt the butter; stir in the curry powder and flour. Off heat, gradually stir in the chicken broth and water, keeping smooth. Over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, cook until thickened and boiling.

Makes about 3¼ cups sauce. Mix about 2 cups of the sauce with the rice and spread half of the mixture in an 8 by 8 by 2 inch baking dish. Scatter chicken over this rice. Spread remaining rice mixture over chicken. Sprinkle with the coconut. Refrigerate, covered. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until hot through and coconut is toasted — about 20 minutes. Meanwhile, reheat remaining sauce and pass separately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

FILLING SOUP FROM PORTUGAL

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press

To keep the cost of a supper reasonable and make serving easy, you may want to consider offering a hearty Portuguese soup as the main course. The soup is a savory combination of beef, sausage, kale, cabbage, potatoes and pinto beans. It tastes delicious with crusty Portuguese, French or Italian bread. We skip salad when we serve this soup. After it, dessert and coffee.

Portuguese cooks use kale in many of their soups and now that this recipe has come into our ken, we understand their favoring the flavor, texture and color this green contributes. Fortunately, chopped kale comes frozen nowadays and is convenient to have on hand.

If you have an electric tureen or one with a candle warmer, by all means use it for serving the soup at the table. Second helpings are inevitable—the soup is that good—and the tureen will keep them hot.

PORTUGUESE KALE SOUP

2 pounds soup bones
1 pound boneless chuck beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
5 cups water
2 tablespoons beef bouillon granules
½ pound Portuguese or Spanish sausage, linguica or chorizo, sliced ¼-inch thick
1 medium onion, cut in thin strips
1 10-ounce package frozen chopped kale
2 cups coarsely shredded cabbage, lightly packed
2 medium ½-pound potatoes, pared and cut in 1½-inch chunks
1 8-ounce can pinto beans undrained or 1 scant cup beans and ¼ to ½ cup liquid from a 16-ounce can of pinto beans
¼ teaspoon pepper

In a large saucepot bring the bones, beef and water to a boil; skim. Add bouillon granules and simmer, covered, for 1 hour. Add sausage; simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Add remaining ingredients; let bubble gently, covered, until beef and vegetables are tender—about 1 hour longer. With a slotted spoon remove the bones. Refrigerate soup, tightly covered, overnight. Before serving, remove most of the hardened fat from the top. Heat soup and serve in wide soup bowls with crusty bread and sweet butter. Makes 2¼ to 2½ quarts—4 or 5 hearty main-dish servings.

SWEET MAUREEN BARS

½ c. peanut butter (smooth or crunchy)
½ c. corn syrup
½ c. brown sugar packed
1 tbsp. butter (first amount)
2 c. rice krisples
1 c. peanuts (plain or in red skins)
¼ c. butter (second amount)
⅔ c. (10 tbsp.) cocoa
½ c. granulated sugar

In pot combine thoroughly the peanut butter, corn syrup, brown sugar and 1 tbsp. butter. Heat, stirring constantly on medium heat until nearly boiling. DO NOT LET MIXTURE BURN ON BOTTOM OF POT. Remove from heat.

In a large bowl combine rice krispies and peanuts. Pour in hot peanut butter mixture and at once stir to thoroughly combine. Mixture is very stiff. Pack firmly and evenly into the bottom of a buttered 8" square pan. To press it use the back of a large dessert spoon dipped several times in hot water to keep it from sticking to the mixture. Let stand on counter while you prepare the Chocolate Topping.

In a small pot combine butter (¼ c.), cocoa and sugar. dissolves. At once spread evenly over bars. Chill n refrigerator. With sharp knife until butter melts and sugar cut into 32 bars. Store in container in refrigerator and put out on plate only a few minutes before serving.

There Are 50 Types of Squash

You say you don't like squash? But have you tasted every one of the 50 varieties in the dozen different types?

Few of us have, although squash have become more widely known lately as nutritional values are investigated.

New types and varieties have been distributed and vegetable dealers as well as gardeners are growing them.

No longer are we restricted to the densely fleshed winter Hubbard squash resembling pumpkin in texture. The more delicate flavor and lighter texture of the small white Scallop or Pattypan squash can be enjoyed as fruits are gathered from home garden vines before frost.

These will keep a week or so, as will young Zucchinis, in cool storage or in the vegetable bins of refrigerator.

Young marrows are liked by some; they have less flavor and texture than the youngest Zucchini, and depend on seasonings for their interest.

All immature squash fruits from the vines at the end of the growing season can be used in the several ways suggested here. You will like some ways more than others no doubt, but at least you discover that not one fruit need be wasted. Develop other methods of your own.

The first suggestion is to try Scallop and Zucchini, small sizes, in small dice for salads; no preparation is needed other than wiping the fruit on the outside. The skins and seeds are edible in the young stages of these two kinds. Combine with Cheddar cheese dice, green curly endive, chopped chives, oil and lemon juice dressing with a few grains of salt if wanted, and a few cut dates.

The next easiest use of these two squash kinds is in vegetable soups. Made with a base of split green peas with soy grits as an additional protein thickener, small chunks of squash add flavor, texture, color and nutrients.

Mature winter storage squash are also desirable in these kind of soups. The skin needs removing with a swivel blade parer for it is tough by winter; and all membrane and seeds are scraped out too for these become tough. Just the solid flesh is used.

Stuffing and baking in the oven is the only method many people know of using squash. This perhaps is why they become tired of them as happened one summer with stuffed sweet peppers. I recall that the stuffing never varied, which it could have done with a bit of ingenuity.

Instead of oven heat, I use either a covered frypan (for squash like Zucchini and Scallop) or a deep Dutch-oven type of pan also having a cover (this one for Buttercup, large chunks of Hubbard and of mature Zucchini).

In a great last minute hurry for a quick supper in a short time, the following recipe was put together and recorded for future use.

Skillet-steamed Stuffed Squash

- ½ cup brown rice
- 1 cup salted cold water
- 2 cups whole small carrots OR circles ¼-inch thick
- 3 Scallop squash, 4-inch diameter
- 1 cup chopped kale or spinach
- 1 Tsp soft margarine
- 1 tsp fine chopped onion
- 1 red-ripe tomato, cut small
- 1 Tsp chopped parsley or chervil

Slice each squash across, making 6 circles. Take off a tiny piece if needed to make them sit level in the pan.

Put carrots on to boil in frypan with boiling water less than half way over carrots. When squash is prepared, add the pieces, pushing carrots aside. Boiling water should now be about half way up to edges of squash pieces. Return to boiling, still with lid on.

Now in rice saucepan, with all liquid evaporated, push rice to sides of pan. Put margarine in bottom centre; add onion and tomato. Cook for few minutes until soft and golden.

Now add chopped kale or spinach spread around over carrots to steam-cook. A tablespoon of boiling water may be needed if not enough steam is still present. Cook for 5 minutes.

Now test all vegetables for fork tenderness. The squash must still hold its shape and not be mushy.

Spoon cooked rice over the cooked onion-tomato in centre of pan. Taste for needing a little more salt. Don't overdo it because of the natural salts in these quick cooked vegetables.

Serve 2 squash halves to each plate; surround with carrots and kale or spinach. Mound a spoonful of rice mixture on top of each half.

With a warm homemade wholewheat and rye bun (large size) this dish makes a most satisfactory meal Serve a small green salad with it if you like, or fresh pears or dessert apples, with squares of Cheddar-cheese or a mound of cottage cheese.

If not tried before, you will discover that the various squash kinds are an inexpensive way to serve delicious fall meals with great variety.

DENTIST'S RANGEFINDER

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A Toledo dentist, Barbara Sawka, drove to Cleveland for an Ohio Dental Association seminar recently, and got lost in downtown traffic.

She was driving somewhat aimlessly when she spotted a bumper sticker on a car ahead. It said, "Candy is a Halloween Prank."

That message, she reasoned, could only come from a dentist. So Dr. Sawka followed the automobile and, sure enough, it was a Cleveland dentist going to the same meeting.

HUNGRY DANCER DISH

RATATOUILLE a La KAIN

- 1 large eggplant—sliced
- 2 green peppers — cut in large strips
- 2 Spanish onions — sliced
- 2 or 3 zucchini — sliced
- 1 lb. mushrooms
- 1 lb. mozzarella cheese — sliced
- 1 28 oz. can tomato sauce

Slice unpeeled eggplant ½ inch thick and place in a layer in a large greased casserole. Add, in layers, Spanish onion slices, sliced zucchini, sliced mushrooms and cheese. Repeat layers until quite deep as there is a great deal of shrinkage. Also, the amount should vary according to the number of people you want to feed.

Don't be afraid to make too much! It can be reheated. Pour tomato sauce over all and bake until tender (400 degrees for 45 minutes). Remove lid and add last layer of cheese 20 minutes before serving. Make sure that it is brown and bubbly on top. Great with crusty French bread and a salad or for a real hungry crowd serve with fried chicken, steak or fish.

Solving the Mystery Of Preparing Venison

It's that time of the year when I receive the first request from readers asking how the wild taste is best removed from venison.

This has become a hardy annual and it would be amusing, were it not that tons of fine venison are ruined each year through people trying to disguise its natural flavor.

For my purposes here, the word venison covers the meat from all the Canadian big-game animals in the deer-like class, from moose to antelope.

Venison is lean and coarse grained, a perfect combination to finish up dry and tough with careless handling. And since coarse-grained meats react strongly to the use of salt, venison for roasting or broiling is never salted until it reaches the table. On the other hand this reaction has positive value in hastening the action of tenderizing marinades.

Venison cuts such as steaks, rack and shank are easy to recognize when the animal has been butchered by an expert but since all these animals are different in shape to a beef steer, some cuts defy accurate placement.

Poor butchering compounds the mystery, making it tough for the cook to decide whether to treat it as a tender part and cook in dry heat or to use a tenderizing marinade and whip up a stew or a pot roast. But we should always remember that some of the finest venison dishes fall into the stew category.

It is a fact of nature that a good 98 per cent of all game animals are young and more tender than those few huge trophy animals taken each hunting season. So here, my remarks are aimed at the under three-year-olds, the prime table quarry.

Steaks from such a source can be broiled, like beefsteaks, although it won't hurt one little bit to baste them with a melted butter-red wine mix. However, my favorite way with venison steak is panfrying in the way the French treat the finest beefsteaks.

Melt three tablespoons butter in three tablespoons cooking oil in a heavy skillet, brown a crushed clove of garlic and discard, then add the steak when the oil-butter mix is so hot that the meat sizzles on contact. This mix allows high heat without the butter burning.

Carefully move the steak around the skillet so every part gets even cooking. When beautifully browned underneath, turn them over and continue to worry them back and forth.

Check by slitting one edge and when at the rare stage — a thin layer cooked top and bottom but with the middle very red — pour in one cup dry red wine, turn down the heat to a gentle bubbling stage and grind on black pepper, turning the steaks several times for five to seven minutes depending on their thickness. Remove the steaks to a hot oven dish and put them into a 300 oven, while the pan juices are thickened with one tablespoon flour and cooked on fairly high heat to reduce slightly.

Transfer the steak to a deep serving platter and cover with the rich wine sauce and serve right away — they should be medium-rare and tender.

For a fine venison roast, cover the meat with a blanket of suet and roast slowly in a 350 oven until the meat thermometer registers medium-rare.

Ground venison burgers are superb when broiled but still call for basting with either a butter-wine mix or a good barbecue sauce. And here is my own simple recipe for those less tender "roasts."

Melt four tablespoons butter with four tablespoons cooking oil in a heavy pot, flour the hunk of venison and carefully brown on all sides. Then add one can beef consomme (undiluted) plus the consomme can measure of dry red wine, six peppercorns, six cloves, one onion and one carrot thinly sliced. Tightly cover and simmer slowly for three to five hours depending on the size of the cut.

When tender, remove the venison to a warm platter, strain the pot juices, put back into the pot and thicken with one tablespoon flour. (Arrowroot is even better than flour). Serve, cut in thick slices with the sauce on the side and pass around your choice of red-current, mint or apple jelly.

Her Discard Eagerly Awaited

DEAR ABBY: TIRED OF ACTING wrote: "After eight years of marriage, I've fallen out of love with my husband. He's generous, a wonderful father and easy to live with. I have a car of my own, don't have to work, and I know he loves me, but I'm sick to death of faking it in the bedroom."

Well, Abby, I've been married and divorced three times and all three husbands were great in the bedroom. But the first was allergic to work, the second chased women and the third was the world's worst father.

I've been alone for five years and I'm soured on men, but if TIRED OF ACTING decides to dump her husband, I'll be waiting in the wings for a man with his credentials. Sex isn't everything. — ALONE

DEAR ALONE: Those wings must be pretty crowded, judging from the number of letters I've received from women who'd like to be on that waiting list. Which only goes to reaffirm that one woman's leftovers is another woman's banquet.

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations to SICK OF TIPPING! He's the first person who's made me furious enough to actually write a Dear Abby letter.

My husband supervises the dining room of a large hotel. He started as a busboy and worked his way up. We have four children who have depended on tips for the roof over their heads for quite a while.

Abby, the responsibilities of a waiter are unbelievable. It's the waiter who makes sure that four or five tables are served the drinks they ordered, and that six different dinners (which all require different cooking times) arrive at the table at the same time, and all hot. He brings water, coffee, keeps the ash trays clean and clears the table before being asked. Many waiters work for eight hours consecutively without sitting down once!

I know everyone who works with my husband, and they earn every tip they get.

DEAR WASH: A waiter who performs the services you describe has certainly earned a generous tip. But what about the waiter who's incompetent, indifferent or surly? Does such a waiter "earn every tip he (or she) gets"? If tips were given for performance instead of automatically, some waiters would be "in for a big surprise."

DEAR ABBY: Begging to disagree with you, "regrets only" on an invitation DOES NOT simplify matters.

What about those persons who are out of town and do not receive the invitation? How could THEY attend?

"Acceptances only" is much more practical. That way the hostess knows definitely who is coming.

The best idea of all is a firm "Please reply," followed by a phone call should the hostess receive no response. — G.W.H.

DEAR HOTEL GUEST: I am not working here because I want to earn money; I just enjoy emptying wastebaskets full of peanut shells and stale beer. "Black Lung" is a small risk to take in exchange for the pleasure of dumping ashtrays all day long. But the best part is the invigorating exercise of scrubbing toilets and bathroom floors — guaranteed to turn hands sandpapery even through rubber gloves. My fondest memories will always be the thrill of pursuing those elusive little hairs all over the bathtubs.

So, you see, that tip really wasn't necessary. Please accept my deepest thanks for your generosity. The penny you left will go towards furthering my college education. — YOUR HOTEL MAID.

The Creative Apple.

ANOTHER WAY TO SAY "I LOVE YOU" TO YOUR FAMILY.

Just watch those faces light up when your family tastes the fresh-picked flavour of jams, jellies and preserves you've made yourself.
Nothing tastes so good. Or so special.

ROSY APPLE JELLY MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID.

Makes about 12 medium glasses.
5 cups prepared juice (about 3½ lb fully ripe apples—McIntosh, Rome, Greening and Crabapple and 3 cups water)
7½ cups sugar

First prepare the fruit—Remove blossom and stem ends from 3½ pounds apples. Cut in small pieces (do not peel or core). Add 3 cups water, bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Crush with masher and simmer, covered, 5 minutes longer. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure 5 cups juice into a large saucepan.

Then make the jelly—Thoroughly mix sugar and juice. Place over high heat and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. At once stir in Certo. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, skim off foam with metal spoon. Pour quickly into sterilized glasses. Cover at once with ⅛-inch hot paraffin.

ROSY APPLE JELLY MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as previously described using a total of 5 pounds apples and 5 cups water to obtain 7 cups prepared juice. Measure 9 cups sugar and set aside. Add 1 box Certo crystals to juice in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and continue as previously described. Makes about 15 medium glasses.

2 CREATIVE ADDITIONS.

Using one of the recipes previously described, have fun creating your own specialty-of-the-house jams with these variations:

1. Spiced Apple Jelly—Prepare Apple Jelly as directed, adding ½ teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and allspice to juice.
2. Citrus-Apple Jelly—Prepare Apple Jelly as directed, adding 1 tablespoon grated lemon, lime, or orange rind to juice.

USE THE SHORT-BOIL OR FREEZER METHOD.

They both give you fresh-picked fruit flavour. So you choose.

ENJOY THAT JUST-PICKED FRESH FRUIT FLAVOUR YEAR 'ROUND.

Why stop here? You've just begun! For many, many more recipes that tell you how to turn the fruits (and vegetables) of every season into mouth-watering delicacies, take a peek underneath the label of a bottle or into a box of Certo or write to General Foods Kitchens, P.O. Box 4019, Terminal "A", Toronto, Ontario and we'll send you our booklet "Jam & Jelly Making: A Pleasurable Art".

The cereal aisle at your supermarket displays a myriad of different brands of cereal, in a variety of sizes and shapes of boxes, offering you everything from frosted to sugared to honeyed to puffed to flavored. Some of them even claim to offer food value.

If you manage to turn a deaf ear to the demands of your children to buy the cereal with the plastic airplane inside, and look to the labels, you'll probably be disappointed. They won't tell you much about the nutritional value of the cereal. Most labels don't tell you whether or not the cereal has been refined, or to what extent it was refined. And they won't tell you what kind of processing the cereal's been through, or how much sugar's been added.

If you turn from the labels to nutritional research done on breakfast cereals, you may still find yourself without an answer. Most researchers, wary of libel suits from cereal manufacturers, will not mention brand names when they write their reports. In the end, you still don't have specific information to help you decide what cereal to buy for your family. And you may, like your children, be influenced by costly, persistent, cereal advertising, and choose accordingly.

We'd like to sort out some of the confusion. There are three main facts you should consider when you go shopping for breakfast cereal. First: remember that any refining process removes nutrients. A whole grain cereal, which is an unrefined cereal, is better for you than a refined one. If a cereal is whole grain, it will say so clearly on the label. Now, there are two groups of whole grain cereals: one that requires a few minutes of cooking at home, the other made up of ready-to-eat cereals. While ready-to-eat whole grain cereals are better for you than refined cereals, the cereals that require some cooking time are better than ready-to-eat ones. The more cooking that a cereal requires, the less it has been processed, and the more nutrients it contains.

Second: be wary of cereals that have been "puffed." The kind of processing used to "puff" cereals lowers the nutrient quality of the protein contained in the cereal.

Third: avoid sugared cereals. When manufacturers add sugar to cereals, they dilute the nutrients in the cereal. An ounce of pre-sweetened cereal, containing a third to a half of its weight in added sugar, besides having more empty calories, does not have as much cereal protein, vitamins and minerals as an ounce of unsweetened cereal. Sugared cereals just aren't as nutritious.

The most healthful breakfast cereal you can serve your family is a whole grain one you cook yourself. When you can, allow those extra five minutes in the morning to prepare it. Then, keep a ready-to-eat whole grain cereal on hand for those mornings when you haven't time to cook. Make sure it hasn't been puffed or presweetened.

And, if your family shows a preference for a refined cereal, and you must buy it, check to see that it is enriched with thiamin (B1), riboflavin (B2), niacin (B3) and iron. Be certain that the iron the manufacturer has used to enrich the cereal is reduced iron. (If it's iron pyrophosphate or orthophosphate, don't buy it. Iron in those particular forms is not well used by your body.) Soon all cereal manufacturers will be required by law to use reduced iron. Until then read the lists of ingredients carefully.

If you take our advice about cereals, not only will your family be healthier for it, but your budget will benefit. Check the unit pricing at your store. With breakfast cereals, you pay for the sugar added and the processing. You'll find that unrefined, unsweetened cereals—cereals that require some cooking—are your best buys.

Diuretics Are Used For Special Purposes

By L. L. Coleman, M.D.

My sister was given a water pill two years ago by her doctor. She still keeps taking them even though she has never returned to the doctor's office. Isn't this a dangerous thing to do — to take drugs indefinitely like that? — Miss F. B.

Dear Miss B.:

This is a completely irresponsible way of taking drugs. It can only lead to problems. As you know, many people, women especially, think of a water pill as an adjunct to a weight-reducing program.

This is not true. Diuretics (water pills) were created and are used for much more important medical problems that demand an increased loss of fluid in the body.

One of the side effects of the long-sustained use of diuretic drugs is the depletion of minerals like sodium and potassium. This can upset the mineral balance in the body and produce problems that are difficult to control.

I am certain that your sister's physician did not write a prescription with the instruction that it was to be taken forever. That would be hazardous. I am also certain that your sister has been manipulating friends and "friendly pharmacists" in conning them into giving her a drug that should have been under the control of her doctor.

You once wrote a column on the dangers to hearing of ultrasonic noises in factories. My husband's hearing has definitely been affected. Now I wonder if other organs of his body can be injured. He works with a drill press in a steel factory. — Mrs. B.S.B.

Dear Mrs. B.:

Ultrasound or ultrasonic vibrations do their damage because they are not heard as one hears conversational speech or music.

These vibrations are thousands of cycles above those needed in conversation. They can and do affect the blood-brain barrier and can even affect the production of sperm in some men.

It seems possible that other organs, when bombarded for a long time, may have their function impaired, too. It is for this reason that the most stringent safety devices are now being incorporated in most factories.

Ultrasonic sounds are being blocked with protective mechanisms so that people exposed to this "silent bombarder" may be spared its potential harm.

Turkey Leftover Solution

If, like most cooks, you're convinced that leftover turkey is nothing to sing about, then these two new recipes should be music to your ears!

Turkey Sausage Pie is a symphony of flavors which combines zesty sausage with mild flavored leftover turkey and mushrooms. An envelope of turkey gravy mix underscores the hearty filling. The two crust pie looks elegant enough for company and when the pie is opened, their appetites will sing! Buttered whole green beans, jellied fruit salad, ice cream with butterscotch sauce and milk and coffee, complete the menu.

Turkey-Orange Chef Salad has all the sparkle of a jazz composition. Just as jazz relies upon a unique combination of chords, so does this main dish salad combine the unusual flavors of turkey, cheese, fruit and salad greens. The golden fruity dressing gets extra verve from the addition of prepared yellow mustard. Add cream of celery soup, warm rolls, devils food cake, milk and coffee for a company lunch or light supper.

TURKEY-SAUSAGE PIE

FILLING:

4 ounces brown-and-serve sausage links
½ cup sliced mushrooms
1 envelope turkey gravy mix
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 cups diced cooked turkey

CRUST:

1 cup sifte all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon celery seed
One-third cup shortening
2 tablespoons cold water
Cream or milk

Brown sausage links; cut into fourths. Drain mushrooms, saving liquid. Prepare gravy mix according to directions, using mushroom liquid with water added to make 1 cup. Combine gravy wth sour cream, sausage, mushrooms, and turkey; spoon into 9-inch pie pan. Sprinkle with water, mix with a fork until dough holds together. Roll out pastry into a circle and place on top of filling. Crimp edges, slash, and for a shiny crust, brush with cream or milk. Bake in 500 deg. oven 45 to 50 minutes or until crust is browned and filling bubbling hot. 6 servings.

TURKEY-ORANGE CHEF SALAD

2 cups diced cooked turley (preferably white meat)
1 unpeeled apple, thinly sliced
1 cup diced medium-sharp cheddar cheese
2 navel oranges, peeled and sectioned
6 cups mixed salad greens
Citrus French Dressing, recipe below

Marinate turkey and apple slices in ¼ cup Citrus French Dressing for 1 hour. Combine ingredients in large salad bowl and toss with additional dressing to coat lightly. 6 servings.

CITRUS FRENCH DRESSING

¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup Prepared yellow mustard
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon onion salt
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon grated orange peel
½ cup salad oil

Combine ingredients in a small bowl or jar with cover. Stir or shake to blend. Makes about 1 cup dressing.

Either Raw or Cooked, Cauliflower Role Varied

For a vegetable that wasn't even grown commercially in North America until the mid 1920's, cauliflower has certainly won a place in many food lovers' hearts (and stomachs!).

Cauliflower, once described by author Mark Twain as "the cabbage with a college education" is available practically year round. Right now is the time to buy it while supplies are plentiful on local markets.

Good quality cauliflower is creamy-white, clean and firm with a compact head. Any leaves surrounding the flowerets should be fresh looking and green. Watch out for cauliflower that is spotted or has yellowed leaves and loose flowerets—these indicate that it is overmature.

Once you've got the cauliflower home store it in the crisper in the refrigerator. Cauliflower should be used within a week.

Cauliflower is one of those vegetables which is just as good raw as cooked, so don't be afraid of undercooking it. In fact overcooking is a common mistake or cooking it too far ahead of time and trying to keep it warm. You can even cook the fresh green leaves of the cauliflower just as you would spinach. Then serve them with butter and lemon.

Either raw or cooked, cauliflower has many uses. Raw floweret clusters, cold and crisp, go great with dips. For an all-occasion salad toss flowerets or raw cauliflower with pieces of lettuce, crumbled blue cheese, onion rings and top it off with your favorite dressing.

Cooked cauliflower, mixed with other vegetables or alone, is equally delicious. Creamed cauliflower with cheese, mushroom or hollandaise sauce is simply mouth watering. Cauliflower is at its best in the following two recipes: Baked Cauliflower with Onion and Creamed Cauliflower and Peas.

BAKED CAULIFLOWER WITH ONION

1 medium cauliflower
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sliced green onion

Separate cauliflower into 1-inch flowerets and place in greased casserole. Sprinkle with salt and dot with butter. Cover and bake at 325 degrees F until almost tender (45 to 50 minutes). Add onion, cover and bake until just tender (5 minutes). 6 servings.

CREAMED CAULIFLOWER AND PEAS

1 medium cauliflower (about 2 pounds)
1 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups frozen peas
½ cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
Dash pepper
Dash paprika
1 teaspoon salt
½ pint (1¼ cups) light cream
¼ cup cooking liquid
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup crushed potato chips

Separate cauliflower into flowerets. Cook in boiling, salted water until almost tender (about 20 minutes). Add peas and continue cooking until tender (3 to 5 minutes). Drain, reserving liquid. Saute onion in butter until transparent. Blend in flour and seasonings. Gradually add cream and liquid. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add lemon juice. Combine sauce with vegetables, turn into greased baking dish. Top with potato chips and broil until lightly browned (1 to 2 minutes). 6 servings.

AUSTRIAN DUMPLINGS

7½ or 8-ounce package farmer cheese
1 large egg
1½ tablespoons flour

Fill a 5 or 6-quart saucepot ¾ full of water; add 1 tablespoon salt; heat. With a fork beat together the cheese, unbeaten egg and flour until blended; let stand about 5 minutes. With wet hands, using 1 level tablespoon for each, shape into balls. Have the salted water boiling and add the dumplings—they will sink. Boil until dumplings all come to the top — a few minutes. Let stand off heae, tightly covered, for 5 minutes. Serve with melted butter and cinnamon-sugar. Makes about 1 dozen—enough for 4 servings.

CALIFORNIA SALAD

6½ to 7-ounce can tuna, drained
¼ cup thinly sliced scallions
8 pimiento-stuffed green olives, sliced
¼ cup diced semi-hard cheese
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
6-ounce jar marinated artichokes
Lemon juice, if desired
Lettuce
4 hard-cooked eggs, halved or quartered
2 tomatoes, sliced

Break up tuna, if necessary, in a salad bowl; add scallions, olives, cheese and oregano. With a fork lift artichoke hearts from jar, cut each in half and add to bowl. Add marinade from artichokes and toss with lemon juice to taste. Serve on lettuce and garnish with eggs and tomatoes. Makes 4 servings.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I recently purchased an Indoor Yucca Plant which I placed in the bathroom with a southern exposure but no direct sunlight. At first I hardly ever watered it, assuming its origin must dictate that it prefers to be on the dry side. A few of the lower leaves yellowed, withered and died. Now I've taken to watering it after the soil has completely dried out. It does have new shoots but the lower leaves seem to be yellowing faster and dying. Help! I'm afraid it's going to be completely bald before it's six months old! — Anxious.

DEAR ANXIOUS: Let's start with what sounds like a total redundancy: an Indoor Yucca Plant. As far as we can determine, this is strictly an outdoor plant and only a miracle would keep it happy inside. Yuccas grow over much of North America and hardiness depends on the species. They do best in full sun in well-drained soil. In fact, most will take considerable drought when established — and many are true desert plants.

If you have an outside garden, we'd suggest you plant it out there — the quicker the better. If possible, group with agaves, cactus, Succulents in desert gardens, or grow with softer leafed tropical foliage plants. We think this is the best possible plan to save your Yucca, and, as we said, if it's possible, get to it right away.

Last Three Java Tigers Live in Reserve

By COLIN McINTYRE

SUKAMADE, Indonesia (Reuter) — This small nature reserve in east Java is the home of the last three Java tigers, a species starved into almost certain extinction by encroaching civilization.

If it does become extinct — and conservationists here have already given up hope for it — it will have gone the the way of the Bali tiger, now presumed to have died out in that lush tropical island currently being opened to large-scale tourism.

The Java tiger is reduced to eating porcupine, not normally part of its diet and a clear indication that it has fallen on hard times.

It is only one example of a number of critically endangered species of wildlife in Indonesia that are fighting for survival against growing population pressures, dealers in both dead and living animals for rich collectors and bureaucratic lethargy and corruption.

Among them are the komodo "dragon" a giant lizard, the orang-utan, the Java and Sumatra rhinoceros and the lovely bird of paradise, which is confined to the virgin forests.

It is a familiar story of a country striving to develop itself as fast as possible at the expense of its once-abundant wildlife.

In 1974, the Indonesian department of agriculture asked the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) to help identify wildlife resources and work out a plan to prevent species from dying out. It also hoped to use them as a tourist attraction, chiefly by improving existing game reserves and creating new ones.

Yet even the best reserves at present are woefully undermanned and unable to prevent booty hunters from entering and leaving at will. The 123,000-acre Sukamade reserve has only two wardens to patrol it.

Last October, the national news agency Antara reported that flora and fauna research in central Java had come to a complete standstill for lack of funds.

A local conservation expert in the province also reported that professional hunters were on the increase, posing a serious threat to wildlife.

On the beach at Sukamade, one of the most popular egg-laying spots for giant turtles, officials are supposed to ensure that 60 per cent of eggs laid are left where they are. Western experts who have visited the reserve say all are being taken and consequently fewer and fewer turtles are coming back each year.

The turtles are also being killed for food, a delicacy across the straits in Bali.

While many of the rarest species such as the komodo, orang-utan and bird of paradise, can officially be trapped or hunted only with written official approval, reliable reports from the east Indonesian island of Flores said local officials sometimes visited the island for a "dragon" shoot.

Jr. Ranger Program Gains

SOUTH RIVER, Ont. (CP) — Interest in a junior ranger program offered by the provincial ministry of natural resources has grown since the program was first opened to girls four years ago.

This summer 480 young women are summer rangers scattered in camps near such points as Bancroft, Espanola, Kirkland Lake, Gogama, Atikokan and Sioux Lookout.

At South River, 35 miles south of North Bay, 24 girls arrived in July from Ottawa, London, Sudbury, Ancaster and other Ontario centres for eight weeks of work and study in quarters on Wendigo Lake.

Daphne Simms, 21, a subforeman at the camp, said one of the purposes of the program is to give the girls a chance to meet others from different parts of the province.

"They aren't allowed to go home during the eight weeks and they get paid $10 a day, six days a week," said Miss Simms, from Parry Sound and in third-year physical education at Laurentian University of Sudbury.

The rangers put in a full day with axes, shovels and paint brushes but, says Miss Simms, they are always ready after dinner to swing a baseball bat, throw a volleyball, swim or hold a sing-song around a campfire.

"Lights out is at 11 but they usually go out about 10. Morning comes early."

"It sure does," agreed Catherine Wood of North Bay and Raymonde Jalbert of Sudbury. They had drawn kitchen duty and had to be on the job at 6:45 a.m.

Ralph Tippett, manager of the ministry's Bracebridge district, said rangers all do the same type of work—be they girls or boys.

"The girls are better workers," he concedes. "I don't know whether it's because they are girls or whether they are trying to prove that they can do the same kind of work. And they gripe less and demand less."

The girls compensate with diligence in areas where extra strength is needed, he said.

"But there isn't much call for brute strength. If it's needed we hire a tractor or some other kind of machinery."

The girls follow a set of rules and trips to town are chaperoned. There is a full-time staff of five for the camp.

BACKGAMMON 75% LUCK, EXPERTS SAY

By NEIL WINTON

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Vernon Ball, a middle-aged 170-pounder with a slight paunch, took on world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali in Puerto Rico last January and won.

Fortunately for Ball, no punches were traded. He is the world champion of backgammon and he was teaching Ali some of the classic opening moves of the world's oldest game.

After about two hours of initiation, Ali apparently felt that he had learned enough and issued a challenge using his trademark doggerel, saying, according to Ball: "Put your title on the line and your behind will be mine."

Ball told the story of his encounter with Ali on a recent trip to New York to publicize the game of backgammon in general and his title in particular.

And Ball says that he is taking the challenge seriously. Perhaps he should, because he amazed the backgammon world himself when he took the world title last January with only about three years' experience.

Backgammon experts say the luck of the dice accounts for about 75 per cent of success at the game. Ball says perhaps he has more than his share of good fortune but insists it was his ability that won him the title.

"A skilful player will protect himself against bad luck or horror rolls, or the other player throwing lucky dice," he said.

The object of backgammon is for each of two players to move 15 pieces around a board, the design of which has changed little since the days of the pharaohs.

The moves are dictated by the roll of the dice and the players move their pieces in a U around the board.

One player moves from the top left of the U and the other from the right side and eventually one player will have moved all his pieces past the opponent's and will then try to get them all off the board.

The first to remove all his pieces wins.

The players indulge in complicated strategy, sizing up the odds of various rolls of the dice and building barriers to trap their opponent.

Ball said he would like to use his tenure as champion to open up the competitive side of the game to the public. He is trying to organize a $100,000 one-on-one televised match.

"Look what the Fischer-Spassky matches did for chess," he said.

"In the old days there were a handful of players, maybe four or five, and they won all the time and they wanted to keep it that way. This small group of people made their living playing backgammon, going to all the tournaments and playing for money on the side."

Ball said that with the recent growth of the game, there are probably about 1,000 people with the skills to win an international tournament.

Christopher Robin Pooh-Poohs Winnie

That Beloved Bear Will Be 50 Years Old On Thursday

A. A. Milne and Christopher, aged four

LONDON — Winnie-the-Pooh will be 50 years old on Thursday, in good shape and rolling in money.

The famous bear made his literary debut on Oct. 14, 1926, when British author A. A. Milne's book Winnie-the-Pooh was first published.

With illustrations by Ernest Shepard, it told of the imaginary adventures of Milne's 5-year-old son, Christopher Robin, and his toys at Cotchford Farm, Milne's home in a Surrey wood about 30 miles southwest of London.

Now We Are Six, a collecton of poems, followed in 1927, and House at Pooh Corner appeared in 1928.

Christopher Robins' other toys — Piglet, Tigger, Kanga and Eeyore the donkey — kept their innocence while the books were becoming childhood classics.

But Winnie-the-Pooh, the teddy bear, crossed the Atlantic, met Walt Disney and has been coining money ever since.

"When you consider that the Sears Roebuck concession alone is worth between $2 million and $6 million a year to us, you will see that Winnie-the-Pooh is very big world wide," said Keith Bales of Disney's London office.

But the younger Milne, who now runs a bookshop in Dartmouth, on the southwest coast, told a London newspaper:

"I don't identify with many of the things which are being marketed under the name of Pooh as anything to do with anything I ever owned or felt any fondess for.

"Frankly, the exploitation of the books makes me sick. It's nothing to do with any of the Milnes. It's a caricature.

"To me, Pooh is a toy I had as a child. When he first appeared in print, the books were true to my idea of him and that was fine. But he has now gone well beyond that and become a cult."

Winnie . . . a mockery?

WALDHEIM STAYS

UNITED NATIONS — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim appears assured of a second five-year term in office after announcing his willingness Tuesday to remain as chief executive beyond the end of the year.

The Austrian diplomat, apparently unchallenged by rival contenders, is expected to be endorsed shortly by the Security Council and then formally reappointed by the 145-member General Assembly.

Citing messages from many governments backing him for re-election, Waldheim said in a statement issued through a spokesman that he would regard reappointment as a "privilege and an honor."

Charles Marriage Rumors Fuelled

LONDON — British tradesmen, including anyone from candlestick makers to food suppliers, have been told they may soon apply to use the coveted words "By appointment to the Prince of Wales."

The announcement from Buckingham Palace caused more speculation here that Prince Charles, 27-year-old son of Queen Elizabeth and heir to the throne, is thinking of marriage soon.

For centuries firms that supply goods regularly to members of the Royal Family have received a special endorsement they can display on their shop fronts or advertisements.

LOS ANGELES — Sheriff's deputies captured three suspected burglars in the same way the Greek hero Theseus escaped from the Labyrinth in the classic tale. They just followed the thread.

Allejandrain Fernandez, 22, reported her industrial sewing machine, valued at more than $400, stolen from her home. Deputies David Stone and Charles Cortez were intrigued to find in the alley behind the house one end of a thread. The thread went into a yard. The deputies followed it, through yards, over fences, and across streets and alleys for four blocks. At the other end of the thread they found an industrial sewing machine and Mary Duran, 49, Mary Palafox, 38, and Benjamin Gallegos, 49, who were all arrested on suspicion of burglary.

LAS VEGAS — The Del Webb Corp. is screaming about the $500,000 tab for investigating Frank Sinatra for a state gambling licence saying it is unfair to other stockholders. The Nevada Gaming Commission has ordered Sinatra to get a licence because of his interest in Del Webb, which owns five casinos in Las Vegas, Reno and Lake Tahoe.

WASHINGTON — The 1.3 million copies ordered in advance have already been sold. So have another 700,000 in reorders. Stevie Wonder's Songs in the Key of Life, released last week to critical acclaim and unprecedented radio airplay, has become the fastest-selling album in pop music history. The album this week entered the three most authoritative record popularity surveys in the No. 1 position. Billboard, Cashbox and Record World magazines all report that Wonder's $13.98 list-price, double-record set needed only one week to surpass its rock, soul, pop and jazz rivals.

WIFE ENTERS CONVENT ...ALIMONY CONTINUES

WASHINGTON — The U.S. supreme court Tuesday rejected a man's claim that he should be excused from paying alimony because his ex-wife entered a convent.

The court refused, without comment, to hear an appeal by James Lane of Chicago, who sought a change in his divorce decree after his former wife entered a Milwaukee Catholic convent.

Testimony showed she was a novitiate at the time of the court action and had not yet taken a vow of poverty as a nun. Lane argued that her status was the same as that of a woman who had joined the work force.

Annie's the Queen Of Sneak Thieves

MIAMI — The Chicago police commander and Miami-Dade County metro detective describe Annie Branch as a queen of shoplifters and sneak thieves.

She rode in a Rolls Royce, owned and operated a Chicago restuarant, and every day, they said, she sent out 40 to 50 girls to the downtown Chicago shopping area to shoplift and rob.

She had been arrested more than 50 times, said metro detective Herb Evans, adding that "Annie had over the years developed an expertise" for spotting and selecting her victims.

The two officers were among several witnesses testifying in circuit court here Tuesday before Judge Richard Fuller passed sentence. Annie was convicted last month of lifting close to $27,000 worth of jewellery from the handbag of a wealthy woman, while the two were in a washroom at Miami International Airport. He sentenced her to 10 years in prison.

Greenwood Rakes Ceiling on Budget

Greater Victoria school trustee Lavinia Greenwood said Tuesday she questions the motives behind the board's decision last week to set the ceiling on the 1977 operating budget at $42 million.

She and trustee Hal Knight and Daphne Temple voted against setting the ceiling. The motion passed, however, by a 6-to-3 margin.

Mrs. Greenwood said she had proposed an increase of two per cent over the 1976 budget which would have brought the 1977 budget closer to $43 million.

Her two per cent figure was mathematically calculated she said, and would not only enable the district to maintain all its current programs, but also prevent further school closures.

Mrs. Greenwood said the $42 million figure agreed on by other trustees is "just a guess" and means either one of two things to her — the board is not serious about setting a maximum uplift and does not intend to stick with it, or the ceiling is the rationale behind in closing of more schools.

Mrs. Greenwood has been opposed the school closures since District 61 in January decided to shut some schools in light of a declining school population.

"No evidence has ever been put in front of this board that shows closing schools saves any money," Mrs. Grenwood said.

She said she believes school enrolment will begin increasing in a few years, and if it does, the closed schools will have to be re-opened and renovated at inflated costs, or new ones built at even greater costs.

"All this disruption for four or five years . . . we're being very short-term," she said, pointing out the district loses the $21,000 provincial grant every time a school is closed.

She said a two per cent increase was based on figures supplied by the administrative staff and takes into account the declining school population on the one hand and the increase in salaries based on Anti-Inflation Board guidelines on the other.

"Our major problem is that we get caught up in the numbers game; pupil-teacher ratio, square footage, number of pupils up or down, and the major portion of our time is spent determining numbers and the effect of number changes. Consequently, time spent on important questions of efficient operation of the district of effectiveness of educational programs, is minimal."

Knight suggested the district hold a seminar on the budgeting process. "I think we all could learn something."

And he said the computer which helped forcast spending for the rest of the year and came up with a $2.2 million saving in the 1976 budget, was a start on program planning, but suggested unless there is an intensive in-service for principlals, teachers and others on what the computerized system was all about, it was destined for failure.

"By far the most difficult job is ahead — working the educational aspects into the systems," the memorandum said.

Survival Course Scheduled

A practical course in wilderness survival will be given at the Victoria YM-YWCA Camp Thunderbird at Glinz Lake on Oct. 16 and 17.

The weekend course is for co-eds 15 and up. It will include shelter construction, fire lighting, first aid, obtaining food and water, plus a discussion on survival psychology.

The fee is $20 which pays for food, transportation and all equipment, except personal camping gear.

STANDING OVATION SALUTES BALLERINA

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The National Ballet Company's Karen Kain, now a rapidly ascending international star, brought at least some members of Tuesday night's large Royal Theatre audience to their feet after her vivid performance of Carmen.

There was no dearth of applause though and despite the late hour — 11:30 p.m. — there was not the usual hurried crowding into the aisles and Kain, her partner Denys Ganio and the company were brought back insistently for five curtain calls.

Forecasts that Kain could inherit the Fonteyn mantle may be a bit premature, but they are not unreasonable. In her performance she exudes that particular radiance that is the special gift of Fonteyn and that other Canadian, Lynn Seymour.

She combines elegance with strength and is stylistically and tehnically superb, with a fineness of balance and line seen usually only in the true ballerina assoluta.

Carmen's sensuality, the triumphant fluanting of her charms and her callousness were present but with a certain detachment which may well be Roland Petit's view of a Carmen who used her seductive beauty with deliberate and calculating purpose.

Petit's concept is alive with humor and a sense of abandon among the crowd. It is visually exciting and contains brilliant ideas, particularly the wonderful manipulation of form and pattern as the corps de ballet performs with a number of ladder-back chairs.

The hand of the master choreographer was evident throughout all the works danced by Petit. He is endlessly inventive and sensitive to the music and theme, paying particular attention to articulate and delicately unexpected movements of hands and feet.

On this program, Carmen does not stand alone as the high moment of the three-hour performance. Pink Floyd, the rock ballet which opened the evening is an exciting modern work of some depth and richness despite the severity of its clinical white costume. The dancing is disciplined, powerful and vibrantly energetic and the staging and lighting creates enchantment.

L'Arlesienne, danced to the Bizet suite, will for my taste, remain as the most moving, dramatic and memorable of the works performed.

A fantastic performance by Rudy Bryans was certainly the finest male interpretation of a danced dramatic work in my recollection.

If one were to look at all four hands in today's deal, he would find it difficult to conceive how South managed to avoid losing two trump tricks at his six-heart contract. But he did so, and the defenders could not have done a thing about it. Sitting South was the late Mike Michaels ,of Washington, D.C.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Hardly any bridge player with a dram of sporting blood would fail to catch slam fever after his partner's raise. Michaels was no exception. When his Blackwood inquiry brought forth a two-ace response, the slam in hearts was bid with dispatch and enthusiasm.

A brief survey of the dummy disclosed a sure diamond loser, so declarer turned his attention to the trump suit. Either a 2-2 division or the queen of trumps in the East hand would result in victory — provided declarer guessed correctly. However, if West had the four outstanding trumps (a highly unlikely possibility), the contract would be in dire jeopardy. So Michaels, in approaching the play, made the pessimistic assumption that West had the missing trumps. His pessimism paid a nice dividend.

The spade queen was taken by the ace, and a club to dummy was followed by the ruffing of a club. South now played a trump to the board's ace, West putting up the nine. When East turned out to be "heartless," declarer's ruffing of a club at trick three was well founded. A third club lead was then ruffed in the closed hand, and after the spade king was cashed, South's remaining spade was ruffed with dummy's next-to-last trump.

A third club ruff reduced declarer to the doubleton K-J of trumps as West helplessly followed suit in clubs. Next came the ace and king of diamonds, and then the nine of diamonds was played to trick 11. West, with the Q-10-4 of trumps remaining, had no option but to ruff.

West now had to lead away from his Q-10 of trumps into South's K-J, enabling South to win the last two tricks.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast
Thursday, October 14

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on happier home life, more security, greater cash flow. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. You get news from afar and it causes you to "Go off your diet." Communicate — get thoughts, concepts, ideas on paper!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ideas are plentiful; key is to be selective. Choose quality, stick with those who are energetic, sincere, dedicated. Eschew super-salesmen types. Accent on relatives, calls, short trips, the locating of lost objects.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Change, variety, perception, travel and love could combine. Virgo, Sagittarius and another Gemini dominate scenario. Be aware of costs, time, motion, getting the most of your efforts and money. Count your change!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look beyond the immediate; detect hints, subtle signals. Check behind the scenes. Hospital visit, temporary confinement or theatrical production could be on agenda. Separate illusion from fact. Pisces, Virgo could figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Co-operate with Leo. Accent on friends, hopes, wishes, profit that can accrue from business venture. Organize priorities. Get what you need by having a definite format or program. Emotional responses tend to dominate logic. Ride with tide!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on standing tall, stick by principles, accepting civic duty, running for office, getting rid of albatross around your neck. Need is to streamline, to shake off the superfluous. More persons are attentive — and expect more of you. You're up to it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good moon aspect coincides now with creativity, intensified relationship, significant changes, the imprinting of your own style. Welcome chance for added independence, fresh contacts, chance to love and be loved. It can happen!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Nothing is slick, smooth and without obligation. Know it and act is if you are aware of it. Applies especially to property, children, family, emotional situation. If immature, you call it "sticky." Otherwise, it is necessary and no cause for panic. What do you choose?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on public relations, partnership, law, permanent ties, marital status. Go slow; let others take initiative. Be a good listener, a shrewd observer. Forces tend to be scattered — leave fine points, details for another, more stable time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Practical affairs should be handled in steady, thorough manner. Don't rush to judgment or throw out health rules. Another Aquarian, or Leo, a Scorpio could figure in scenario. Refuse to be pushed aside by one who is better at talking than performing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your sensitivity surfaces; feelings dominate. If single, you love — madly. If married, you rediscover mate. Married or single, you have better rapport with children. You make significant changes — you get rid of deadwood. You're moving and going places!

IF OCTOBER 14th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are perceptive, vital, have healthy curiosity, are attractive to opposite sex — you have unique way of expressing yourself and you could report, teach, write and you are fascinated with music. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. Emotional setback occurred this year but healing process is underway: You begin socializing to greater extent this month. You'll do more traveling in 1977.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"I got the things you wanted for the kids' camp kit," said Don. "A cheap knife, a fork, a spoon, and a plate. Four of each and twelve bucks the lot."

Susan nodded. "That was cheap. How were they priced?"

Don thought a moment. "Five spoons would be the same as a knife and a fork; a spoon and a fork the same as a knife," he replied. "and one plate the same as a knife and a spoon."

What were the prices?

Thanks for idea to Susan Baker, Norwich, England.

(Answer Friday)

Yesterday's answer: 39 children at the camp.

NEWEST IS OLDEST

EDMONTON (CP) — Athabasca Hall will soon be able to claim that it is the University of Alberta's newest building as well as its oldest.

Originally completed in 1911, the building has had its roof removed. A giant crane and a construction crew are removing the insides in a project that, when finished, will leave sturdy brick walls as the only remaining portions of the original structure.

Then a new building, air-conditioned and built to today's building codes, will be built inside the shell. The renovated building, consisting of Athabasca Hall proper and a link to the annex section of the building will provide the university with 47,500 square feet of space.

Walt Hiller, project manager for the renovation, refers to Athabasca Hall as a "heritage" building and explains that because of the role it has played in the university's history its exterior will be maintained.

The masonry walls and sandstone, including the mortar joints, will be preserved and the windows, in their present frames, will be double-reglazed and retained.

Mr. Hiller said the interior of the building, which has been vacant since being condemned by fire authorities was woodframe construction which could not be retained.

From the outside Athabasca Hall will look the same as it always did.

The university was founded in 1908 and classes were held in two high schools before Athabasca was completed. Then everyone moved in. Within the building were classrooms laboratories, offices, the library, dormitories, the kitchen and dining hall, and even a small gymnasium.

As the campus grew, the building came to be used primarily as a residence and served in that capacity until the completion of the Lister Hall residence facility. In recent years it had provided office space and housed the university post office.

ESCAPE ARTIST Harry Herbert spends spare time hanging around the marketplace, and incidentally, setting world records. Suspended by his heels in Active Furniture parking lot Sunday, Herbert freed himself from a straitjacket in 34 seconds, shaving one minute and 13 seconds off the previous official time. But on Monday he beat himself by shrugging off the jacket in only 21 seconds, which will be recorded in the new Guinness Book of World Records. Herbert also set a record for escape while standing upright by getting free in 12.5 seconds, 11.5 seconds faster than Herbie Karten in Florida earlier this year. (John McKay photo)

Only Lefties Served

Prices are higher than righthand counterparts because no one in Canada makes anything for lefties. Wiser imports from the United States and Britain where shops catering to southpaws have a lengthy tradition.

"It wasn't until I researched this subject that I realized how deprived we southpaws are," Wiser says.

Even language has conspired against them: the Latin word for left, sinister, has come to mean underhanded and evil; the French word gauche has been interpreted to mean ignorant, unstylish. Right, on the other hand, has come to connote correct and proper.

More men than women are southpaws, but nobody really knows why anyone is. About 10 per cent of the population is born left-handed—that would mean about two million Canadians—and there are conflicting theories on the capabilities or incapabilities of lefties.

Artists Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo were left-handed, as are United States President Gerald Ford and pop singer Paul McCartney.

S. Korea Agrees To Import Curbs

SEOUL (AFP) — South Korea has agreed to a Canadian proposal that Korean sweaters and socks be added to the list of Korean textiles subject to Canadian import quotas.

Agreement was reached after a four-day meeting here between J. J. McKennirey of the Canadian department of industry, trade and commerce and his Korean counterpart, Roh Shin-shik.

Astrological Forecast for Friday, October 15

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you depend too much on others, you will be delayed. Know it and insist on a double-check, on having a thorough understanding of basic material. Aquarius and Scorpio could figure prominently. You get chance to rebuild on a more solid structure. You'll comprehend!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check lines of communication. You may be "getting the word" in distorted fashion. Gemini, Virgo individuals might be involved. Accent on relatives, close neighbors, messages, calls, short trip. You're active, attractive and you will be in demand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could be making decision on whether or not to purchase a major luxury item. Key is to compare, to ask questions without being intimidated. Include family in financial decisions, especially those involving residence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be participating in clandestine meeting. Romance, hidden factors are involved. Be discreet. Don't reveal all — keep something in reserve. Pisces figure prominently. Any setback is temporary and probably will boomerang in your favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have great opportunity now because you have a choice. Know it and be confident. If you ask questions, you'll obtain answers. Accent on indirect approach, exploration, testing the waters. Closed door conference could be part of agenda.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You appear to lose something, but ultimate gain far outweighs anything negative. Some wishes are revised, a relationship is rocky but can be righted, stabilized. You learn plenty — including that you are not really responsible for another's debts, burdens.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Status quo is shaken — welcome chance for new starts, added independence. Study Virgo message. Get to heart of matters. Your "love nature" is stimulated. Creative energies flow — your prestige is on upswing. Professional superior could make room for you at top.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may feel as if you are being persuaded in two directions. Simultaneously, Cancer individual figures prominently. Accent on distance, communication, special studies, willingness to accommodate one recently handicapped.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotional burden is lifted; you feel more vital, alive. Accept social invitation. You have a right to live your life in a joyous manner. Know it and eschew dark moods; those who continously sing blues. Money situation brightens too.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on how people respond to you, willingness to follow through on principles dictate. Check contractual obligations. Be thorough where rights, permissions are concerned. Be specific; get promises in writing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obtain valid hint from Capricorn message. Be concerned with basic material, information. One "in charge" may appear to be going in circles. Be patient, but do make pertinent inquiries. Allow for face-saving. If this you do, expect advancement, accolade.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Involvement is indicated. Nothing occurs halfway — it is all or nothing. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio individuals could be part of scenario. Domestic adjustment occurs — changes take place around living quarters.

IF OCTOBER 15th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are musical, have unusual voice, can entertain and teach. Conditions in your life have been scattered, confused during this year and especially last month, in September. Much of this is due to be corrected — you'll be on a more solid base. You'll reunite with family member in December. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You are appealing, somewhat vain, flattered by opposite sex and very charming.

Computer Feeds Pilot Trainer

Inside, I struggle to see the ground from the cockpit of the Boeing 707. With only student instrument pilot skills, I angle for where the ground must be, the jet moving at 160 miles an hour.

Suddenly, a runway light. The four of us in the cockpit shout together: "There it is, there it is."

We never move out of the big tin building in south Seattle. But visual aids make it seem that the jet is plummeting through the air at Seattle, Moses Lake or Yakima, Wash.

Soon student pilots will land at airports in Tehran, London, Bangkok "or anyfhere else you want to go," says Boeing test pilot Bill Allsoff.

"The computer has the information stored to make up the picture on the screen as you 'fly' along," said Skip Wahlin, public relations man for General Electric, which developed the system.

Systems to simulate flight by instrument are far from new. Old types had a pilot closed into a box mounted on springs and hinges with a number of attendants pulling ropes and pushing levers to move it around, simulating flight. The student was expected to answer different movements with correct responses.

But putting the system in perspective—combining instrument functions inside the cockpit with realistic visual references through the windows—has been harder to accomplish. Different systems have been developed, but each had problems.

One system said Allsopp, used film, but before long the film developed streaks. "All a pilot had to do was line up the streaks and he was on final approach (to the airport)," he said. "So the pilot flew the simulator by cues that don't exist in the real world."

"There is a certain cartoonish aspect about the scene, but we can control that with weather," said Allsopp. "It gets very realistic when you're in there flying it. It can scare hell out of a pilot."

Captain A. L. Jones, a Boeing officer, said the goal is to train a pilot completely on the flight simulator, requiring only a short check ride before he is sent off to fly passengers.

He said advantages include the ability to "go into performance edges without risk," savings in money and fuel, reduction in noise and fuel pollution and a controlled environment for better demonstration and student retention. It costs $1,400 an hour to train in a Boeing 727; $280 in the $3 million simulator.

Humidity Vital for House Plants

As long as the days remain sunny and warm or even just mild, we think more on the pleasures of the outdoors than of the needs of pot plants in the home.

Something that can be attended to ahead is provision for humidity around the plants when artificial heat is resorted to for combating the chill of fall.

Several methods of providing humidity have been tried but there is one that seems more practical than the others since it is inexpensive and easily adapted from time to time to suit different plants and rooms.

First must come the realization that air in the modern winter heated home becomes dry. The temperature is maintained at a fairly constant level. Drapes, rugs, upholstered furniture all take in some of the natural moisture that enters from opening doors. And we tend more and more to keep our windows closed during winter so that natural replacement from the moist air of outdoors is excluded.

Even during the past few years of combating waste, or overuse, of the various energy sources, we seldom come across a home where the winter air seems comfortably cool and humid. The greater majority are hot and dry.

Plants, the same as other living things, require a certain level of humidity for normal functioning. Without it, leaves curl and wither; humans find easy breathing difficult.

Some of the South African succulent plants having thick leaves are the ones least affected by dry air. Next, in descending order, are South American desert cacti which are accustomed to cool, even moist, nights.

Least able to cope with dry home air are the so-called tropicals having thin textured leaves soon showing effects of dry air which is also hot. We forget that it is not primarily the 22 to 25 deg. C. temperature which causes these lovely plants to lose their lustre but the dry air taking the moisture from the leaf surfaces instead of moist air supplying an atmosphere which makes it unnecessary for them to lose any of their own moisture into the air.

A similar situation can be noticed outdoors on days of low humidity (either in summer or winter) by rhododendron leaves curling downwards and under to conserve what little moisture they can. They too are natives of moist atmosphere areas.

The plant pots are stood firmly on the stones above the water line. The heat of the room evaporates water into the air around the foliage, creating a healthy condition for the plant, and incidentally, for humans and animal pets who share the atmosphere.

Presence of spider-mite is noticed by the shrivelling of leaves accompanied by a very fine webbing. To prevent and control this harmful insect, keep a reasonable level of humidity. This mite cannot live in moist air.

Gardenia and azalea are two plants indoors in winter that thrive in even more humidity than others. They like a daily water spray with a fine atomizer, as well as a generally humid air.

The wide low bowl or shallow tray of stones with the water level maintained just below the surface of the stones is a useful and attractive way to supply a desirable level of humidity for plants while they are in heated home conditions.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by Katie, Marie and Brian.

DAVIES — In loving memory of our Mom and Granny, Elizabeth Davies, who left us October 13, 1974.
Our lips cannot tell how we miss her
Our hearts cannot tell what to say
God alone knows how we miss her
Daughter Gladys, son-in-law Ted, grandson Ted, wife Mary, great grandaughters Jeannie and Nina, great-great-grandaughters Bonnie and Lori, Grandson Harry, wife Leni, grandchildren Mike, Cathy and Danny.

DAVIES — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Elizabeth, who passed away October 13, 1974.
The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Og the loss of one we loved so well;
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,

DAVIES — In loving memory of a loving mother and grandmother, Elizabeth, who passed away October 13, 1974.
The world may change from year to year
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we loved

Kristianson To Seek Re-Election

Chairman of Saanich School District 63, Dr. Gerry Kristianson, will seek re-election on Nov. 20.

Kristianson said his platform includes stressing the need to continue providing quality education while exercising fiscal responsibility.

"I am proud of the fact that during my term on the board we have been able to improve the teaching of fundamental skills while keeping budget increases to a minimum," he said.

Kristianson is a business consultant and part-time university teacher. He lives in Cordova Bay and has two children attending Saanich schools.

200-Mile Zone Said No Bonanza

HALIFAX (CP) — A senior federal fisheries official said that conservation and rebuilding of fish stocks will be the main thrust of government policy for up to 10 years. He also cautioned Canadians not to expect a bonanza when the 200-mile economic zone comes into effect.

Kenneth Lucas, senior assistant deputy minister of fisheries, told the Engineering Institgute of Canada Congress that fish resources are in no shape for bonanzas and the stress will be on conservation, starting in 1977 and continuing as long as a decade.

Lucas, taking part in the Robert H. Winters Memorial Lecture Series, said Canada will enforce the limit but is not assuming confrontation.

N. Saanich Sets Final Bylaw Hearing

A public hearing will be held by North Saanich council next Monday, final chance for the public to propose changes before aldermen give approval to a revamped subdivision bylaw.

The hearing will be at Trinity Church hall, Mills and West Saanich Roads, at 8 p.m.

About 50 people turned out there Tuesday night for an information meeting dealing with the same subject and Mayor Paul Grieve said today he believes the amended bylaw is close to representing a consensus on acceptable land use limits.

The bylaw if passed will establish seven-acre lot limits in some rural areas and two-acre limits elsewhere. In residential areas where there is piped water, lot sizes will be a minimum half-acre and where wells supply water, the minimum lot size will be one acre.

Grieve said the draft bylaw now provides for some in-law suites and on lot minimums, the harshest critics seem to be satisfied although some still feel compromises have not gone far enough.

The subdivision bylaw when finally approved will actually go beyond what is called for in community planning, he said, because it will specify land-use down to each lot.

After the public hearing, council must weigh any more changes before giving the bylaw third reading and finally adopting it, possibly in November.

$10M in Drugs Seized in U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Thai national is under arrest on charges of smuggling 16 pounds of pure Asian heroin worth $10 million into the United States in an ornate religious pedestal.

John W. Fallon, regional director of the U.S. drug en- Prasarn Bhongsupatana, 42, was arrested as the pedestal was delivered to him with assorted other religious articles at an unspecified address on West 110th Street.

Mao's Will 'Forgery' Alleged

Times News Services

PEKING — Chiang Ching, widow of Mao Tse-tung and more than 30 Chinese leaders of the so-called "radical" faction were arrested during a "conspiracy meeting" while they were "forging" Mao's will, a Western diplomat told Agence,Frande Presse today.

The group was surrounded by security forces which, according to another reliable source, were composed of the personal bodyguards of new Communist party chairman, Hua Kuo-feng.

The alleged plotters were preparing a forgery to try and put Chiang Ching into the chairmanship to succeed her husband, the same Chinese official was quoted as saying.

The same source said the people don't seem to be in the least bit disturbed, not even in private — and nothing shows through in public.

"It has become a pretext for going to tea houses, canteens and restaurants to eat well and toast a few "kampei" (literally, "bottoms up") in a totally relaxed atmosphere," the source said.

So far the arrests and the alleged "coup d'etat" attempt have not been officially confirmed by Chinese officials.

When asked about these reports, an information department spokesman Wednesday still replied "no comment."

The same "no comment" warded off journalists' questions on the reported return to Peking of former Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, who was dismissed in April.

In another leadership switch, vice-premier Li Hsien-nien, once a target of radical attack, appears to have stepped into the role of chief economic planner and foreign policy maker once filled by his old patron Chou En-lai.

BARMAN SHUSHES QUIET WELSH TALK

CARDIFF (CP)—An angry Welsh family has complained ot the Race Relations Board because, they say, they were asked not to speak Welsh in an English hotel.

One of the family, 42-year-old Margaret Hughes, said they went into the bar of a hotel in Torquay, Devonshire, ordered a drink and talked quietly together in Welsh.

"When my brother-in-law went to get the drinks, the proprietor asked him if we would mind not speaking in Welsh. I said this was ridiculous because Welsh is our first language—the one we speak naturally among ourselves."

Miss Hughes asked the proprietor if he would object to people from France speaking French in the hotel.

"He told me the hotel did not normally have foreign visitors because they could not understand the language. I asked other guests in the hotel if they objected to us speaking Welsh. They assured us they did not."

Dafydd Williams, secretary of the Welsh Nationalist Party, said, "I wonder what the people of Torquay would say if they were told not to speak English in Wales?"

Gwynfor Evans, member of Parliament for Carmarthenshire, said he would support the Hughes family in their complaint to the Race Relations Board.

Salal Joe's No Hermit To Friends

By BRUCE OBEE

TURTLE ISLAND, B.C. (CP)—Sometimes the holes in Salal Joe's harmonica are slightly clogged but he can always make enough music for a rousing polka on the dock.

There's inevitably a pot of hot coffee perking on his woodstove, waiting to warm the stomachs of rain-drenched boaters who have just crossed the choppy waters of Imperial Eagle Channel to spend the evening talking politics with him.

Salal Joe, unofficial guardian of the Broken Island Group in Vancouver Island's Barkley Sound, has lived alone for 17 years in a one-room float cabin on this island at the centre of the group.

During the summer he receives visits from literally hundreds of friends from all over Vancouver Island, primarily Port Alberni or the nearby fishing villages of Ucluelet and Bamfield.

In winter he climbs into his hermit shell and settles down for a season of long, cold nights when heavy snowfalls threaten to sink his float and eight-foot waves shake the dishes from the shelves of his cabin.

Joe Wilkowski is his real name. He is probably in his mid-50s but says he can't remember his exact age or his birthday. He also can't seem to remember when he moved to the lonely island more than 90 miles northwest of Victoria.

There are about six different versions of that story. One is that he immigrated to Saskatchewan from Iran after the Second World War. As an orphan he had no immediate family and somehow wandered out to the West Coast where he decided he'd be better off as a recluse on Turtle Island than as an illiterate laborer in Vancouver.

So here he sits, day after day, year after year, listening to his transistor radio to keep up on the political events of the outside world, arming himself for friendly arguments when visitors from the city arrive.

Each spring he would travel about the islands in an old wooden scow collecting a small plant similar to West Coast salal. He packaged the plants and sent them to Vancouver to be sold to florists for use in floral arrangements.

If pickings were slim, Joe would dig clams to sell to a fish processing plant in Bamfield. Lately he has been working for Parks Canada as maintenance man for Pacific Rim National Park.

The Broken Island Group is Phase Two of the park and this summer Joe was awarded contracts to demolish a number of old cabins and build primitive camping facilities on some islands.

When not working for the park, Joe spends much of his time contending with the problems of survival. At a nearby island he has developed a garden which provides fruit and vegetables each year. He has never been keen on seafood so most of his other food is brought to him by fishermen friends.

His friends keep an eye on him when the going gets rough. He has a radio telephone and fishermen often drop by to ensure he's not out of supplies or unhealthy.

Two years ago Joe decided his tiny cabin wasn't large enough to accommodate him and the numerous bits and pieces of junk acquired over the years.

So he began building a new two-room float cabin from materials scrounged from island beaches but this year he decided to stick with the comforts of his one-room shack and use the new one for storage.

He'll probably never move but he continues to reschedule housewarming parties.

Gov't Freeze Aids Protest

The provincial government's announcement that no salary increases are contemplated for public service employees has solidified support for labor's day of protest on Thursday, a union spokesman claims.

Leo Gray, business agent for the 2,400 unlicensed ferry workers, said Tuesday many people who were not behind the day of protest are now supporting it because of the announcement.

He said he would not comment further because he had not received details on the statement but is basing his estimate of increased support on telephone calls he has received from union members.

The executive of the Marine Services General (unlicensed) component of the B.C. Government Employees Union has come out in favor of its members staying off the job on Thursday.

This will, in effect, mean the ferries will not run even though ferry officers, the licensed crew members, have voted overwhelmingly in favor of staying on the job.

The government's position on salaries for public service employees was made in the second quarterly financial report released Monday night along with Premier Bennett's state of the province speech.

The report said any predicted surplus for the current fiscal year does not "contemplate any salary increases for government employees beyond those already contracted."

The BCGEU is involved in negotiations with the government for a new wage package and Gray said the subject of wages will come up at meetings of unlicensed ferry personnel on Thursday.

He said the meetings will take place at every terminal at 5 a.m. at which time labor's day of protest will be discussed along with other matters.

Gray said he expects the majority of the unlicensed members will stay off the job.

He said the members will put up information picket lines at all the terminals as well.

Gray said every effort will be made to keep the terminals safe and provisions will be made for emergency runs, for example, from Swartz Bay to the Gulf Islands, if necessary.

Richardson Quits Over Bilingualism

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson resigned from the federal cabinet today, citing policy differences over French-language rights in the constitution and the government's controversial bilingual program.

"I want to speak openly and frankly to Canadians about the constitution without the restraints imposed upon a member of the cabinet," Richardson wrote in a written statement announcing his resignation.

"I am opposed to placing additional French language rights in the Canadian constitution under a perpetual Quebec veto, at least until the government's bilingual program proves to be workable and more widely acceptable," Richardson said.

A few minutes after Richardson's announcement, Prime Minister Trudeau said he heartily disagreed with the minister's reason for resigning and called the action premature.

Emerging from a Liberal caucus meeting where the resignation was never even mentioned, the PM stated that Richardson's departure may crystallize the issue of French-English relations in Canada and force people to make up their minds on the fuutre relationship between the two language groups.

Trudeau said he regrets losing his sole cabinet representative from Manitoba but noted that he resigned on a question of principle.

He said he argued with the minister for several days that his departure from the cabinet over the question of entrenchment of language rights in the constitution is premature because the provincial premiers have not made up their minds on the question

Condominium Buyer Stuck in Black Hole

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Mrs. Dorothy Caldwell will soon be living alone in what could best be described as the black hole of Esquimalt.

She is the only person who bought a condominium unit in a 20-suite building at 877 Ellery.

The other 19 units were rented. At least they were until tenants began complaining about the total lack of repairs. Now only six of the suites are occupied and the tenants indicate they will not stay long.

The departing tenants are adding to the mess.

Light bulbs have burned out leaving all three floors in darkness (although some of the bulbs were replaced in the past 24 hours when word got around that the building was being checked by the press).

A fire extinguisher was stolen two months ago and has not been replaced.

The third floor is deserted and unlivable in its present condition.

Most of the doors have been jimmied open and the locks are smashed.

Suite 302 is a scene of indescribable filth. The tenants have left behind a pile of garbage on the floor and the rugs in the bedrooms are stained dark yellow and smell of urine. The suite is full of apple cores, empty liquor bottles and flies. Some or all of the garbage may have been left by vandals.

It is difficult to get into apartment 303 because of the pile of clothes left in the entranceway. Whoever lived there appears to have taken only about two-thirds of their possessions.

Each room contains some discarded items, including hockey sticks and a suitcase.

The lock on suite 305 is broken beyond repair. Someone has taken a crowbar to the door of 306, shattering the door frame.

The building's roof leaks and its walls are cracked. The rug in the hall is soaking wet.

Mrs. Caldwell paid $40,500 for her suite on May 20, 1975. The building has not been attended to since that time, she said.

For a while she was not too concerned, but then the front door system broke down and vandals began attacking the place.

"I have been phoning everyone connected with the building, trying to get some help," she said.

"People keep passing the buck. I don't know what to do."

The problem is that the owner, Mid-Island Development Ltd., has been unable to meet the first and second mortgage payments and court action is under way.

This litigation has delayed a change in ownership. Once the title passes to new owners, action will be taken to clean up the mess.

However, a court-appointed receiver said Mrs. Caldwell will get some help within 24 hours now that he is aware of the problem.

He said the holder of the first mortgage, Morguard Trust Co., will have someone inspect the property immediately and determine what repairs are necessary.

No action on the long-term problem of major repairs to the building can be undertaken, however, until the title changes hands.

The court action started in April and might take another six months before it is completed.

Until then, Mrs. Caldwell will still have a problem. But at least the building will be cleaner, starting this week.

Walkout Illegal In Ont.

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Domglas Ltd. of Mississauga, Ont., says the Ontario Labor Relations Board has ruled illegal a walkout planned by 2,000 employees for Thursday's national day of protest against federal wage and price controls.

Gordon Shamanski, director of personnel an industrial relations, said today he received a phone call from another company official, who told him that the board had issued a "strong declaration" that a walkout by workers at Domglas's three Ontario plants would constitute an illegal work stoppage.

Shamansi said he has not seen the board's ruling and did not know whether the board had given reasons for its decision. The board has not made public its decision but has issued it to both parties.

The company was seeking to have the protest declared strike in violation of collective agreements with five locals of the United Glass and Ceramic Workers of North America at Domglas plants in Wallaceburg, Brampton and Hamilton.

The union had argued that neither the company nor the board has a right to infringe on workers' rights to express political views.

S. Africa Riot Police Quell Rioting Youths

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Riot police patrolled three black townships outside Cape Town today after rioting Tuesday in which police killed a black youth, blacks burned six cars and 10 persons were arrested.

Some stone throwing was reported during the night in the Langa, Guguletu and Nyanga black townships, but there was no report of any violence today.

Black youths on Monday ransacked more than 100 illegal liquor stores in the three townships and destroyed their stocks. The youths contend that drinking by their elders is a sign of decadence and submission to rule by the white minority.

Tuesday, the youths attacked more shebeens and then about 500 started toward Athlone, a township nearby for coloreds (mixed race). The police broke up the march with tear gas and baton charges. They said one youth was shot to death when he tried to throw a gasoline bomb.

Meanwhile, a powerful black Rhodesian nationalist group has attacked Britain for its insistence that the Geneva conference to set up an interim multiracial Rhodesian government open Oct. 25. (See in depth story on Page 24.)

700 Road Jobs In $40M Plan

About 700 jobs will be created this winter through the $40 million highways program announced Monday, by Premier Bill Bennett.

The total program announced by Bennett will see $120 million worth of highway construction, creating about 2,000 jobs.

But only $40 million will be spent this fiscal year ending March 31, 1977 which should provide about 700 jobs.

Bennett originally refused to say how much of the $120 million would be spent this year or how many jobs would be created.

After repeated questioning Tuesday on the job creation scheme, the premier would only say there would be more jobs than there would have been if the program hadn't been created.

But a highways department report released later in the day sets out a rough outline of the projects.

The report says it is difficult to judge exactly how many jobs will be created, but a major contract usually requires 40 to 50 workers.

There are 41 major contracts in the total $120 million program which should provide between 1,600 and 2,000 jobs. With only a third of the money being spent this year, the program should create about 700 jobs.

An undetermined number of short-term day-labor jobs will also be available.

A total of $30.8 million will be spent for highway construction projects on Vancouver Island, including construction of the North Island Highway and widening of the Trans Canada highway. Of that $30.8 million, $6.5 million will be spent this fiscal year.

A fund of $12.5 million has been authorized for temporary day-labor work on 150 projects throughout the province, all of which will be spent this year.

Meanwhile Tory leader Scott Wallace has charged the premier misled B.C. residents in his announcement of the highways program. He said Bennett appeared to promise $120 million for extra highways work this winter which is not the case.

Syrians Launch Attacks

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Ignoring a tentative cease-fire agreement announced Monday night, the Syrian army Tuesday unleashed a two-pronged attack in south Lebanon using artillery, tanks and infantry.

The Syrians began attacks west toward the port of Sidon, Lebanon's third largest city, and south toward the strategically-located town of Nabatie.

The offensive by an estimated 1,500 Syrian soldiers by late afternoon reportedly had captured Roum, a town that since June had been held by Palestinian and Lebanese leftist forces.

The attack on Sidon, the leftists' last major source of arms, was seen as a new attempt to pressure the Palestinians to accept a settlement sharply restricting their power in a post-war Lebanon.

Two weeks ago, a combined Christian-Syrian offensive pushed the guerrillas out of several key towns in Lebanon's central mountains.

U.S. Clears Vicious Arms for Israel

By LEE LESCAZE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Concussion bombs which have devastating effect over a wide area and secret heat-sensitive equipment for spotting targets at night are the major new items President Ford has agreed to provide to Israel.

This was learned Tuesday as several officials in the Pentagon and state department expressed concern that the bombs and scanning device would destabilize the military balance in the Middle East, giving Israel an important new advantage.

The bomb Israel will now be allowed to have is called a "fuel-air explosive." At a preset height above the ground, a film of kerosene-like inflammable is squirted out to form a circle as much as 30 feet in diameter.

This circle is then detonated, making a concussion that crushes bodies. If the concussion is not fatal, people in the area are then torn apart by the rush of air (including that in their lungs) to fill the empty space momentarily created by the explosion. A firestorm follows.

"We think of this not as a weapon but as a kill mechanism," the narrator of a film made by the military says in describing the bomb.

The targets of the fuel-air explosive are people in trucks, foxholes and bunkers hidden beneath heavy tree canopies and therefore not reachable, efficiently, with other anti-personnel weapons, the film's narrator says.

"It does interesting things to mechanical parts and people. The blast builds up pressures . . . We tested it on sheep placed in foxholes and found their innards burst," the film, which was made in 1972, says.

There aren't any jungles in the Mideast, but the fuel-aid explosive could be used to detonate an enemy minefield, making a safe path through the mines as well as against equipment and personnel.

Objects show up on a screen, defined by the heat they are giving off which is picked up by the camera. NATO does not yet have FLIR, which was initially developed for use in aircraft but now can be used by ground troops as well.

The numbers of these new weapons that Israel will be allowed to get could not be determined. The total cost of the new items is between $100 million and $150 million.

The fuel-air explosive is one of a family of bombs called cluster bomb units (CBUs). In the past, Israel has been allowed to purchase some less powerful CBUs, but only with the restriction that the weapons not be used against civilian populations.

The 'Us and Them' Show

Community Plan Rejected By Residents as Too Vague

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Apparently no one disliked the artists' sketches.

But that was about the only aspect of Victoria's draft official community plan that escaped strong criticism Tuesday night, at a three-hour public hearing where the collective voice of the neighborhoods was heard above all others.

The message it carried was unmistakable:

—That those who live in the inner-city neighborhoods, where the roar of the bulldozers has been and still is heard, reject the plan as too vague and general a document to provide any real protection against the threat of demolition and redevelopment;

—And that residents demand the right to be consulted, to be equal partners with the city administration in determining their future.

Inevitably, although some individual speakers deplored the trend, the meeting typified the confrontation atmosphere that has developed in recent months between neighborhood associations and City Hall.

To some extent this "us and them" situation was emphasized (rather than softened, as was obviously the intent) by a new seating arrangement in which the nine council members sat squarely facing the audience of about 150 people, instead of coyly turning their backs.

Mayor Mike Young allowed a wide range of discussion — often on items not even remotely connected with planning — but became nettled late in the meeting when one community representative accused council of consistently adopting a pro-developer attitude.

Among specific condemnations of the plan, which has been in preparation for two years and which council is required to submit to the Capital Regional Board by late November:

—It was released only month ago, allowing community groups insufficient time to respond.

—That the same groups were denied any say in its preparation.

—Its maps are too small to have any usefulness — one resident defied anyone to make sense of them, even with a magnifying glass — and some of its language ambiguous and vague.

—The document omits any reference to specific policies for individual neighborhoods, because a special supplement dealing with this subject will not form part of the plan proper.

Several neighborhood spokesmen urged council to scrap or drastically modify the existing plan, after close consultation with the various associations, and to arrange a number of additional liaison meetings.

But the mayor questioned the value of such meetings. The only commitment or undertaking he was prepared to give, he said, was that council would consider the views aired before formally submitting the plan to the regional board.

Only if major changes were contemplated would another public hearing be necessary.

Young also emphasized that no decision has been made on whether the official community plan will be registered with the provincial government.

If this procedure is adopted the plan can be changed only with provincial cabinet approval, and in his introductory remarks zoning committee chairman Ald. Alf Hood explained that council was reluctant to adopt this mechanism because it would involve abandoning council's prerogative to one or more senior levels of government.

"It would make decision making too remote from those affected," said Hood.

A five-page brief prepared by Communities United for Action, a coalition of neighborhood associations formed last June specifically to combat the rash of housing demolitions, summarized most of the complaints aired during the evening.

Noting that the draft plan was officially released only on Sept. 10, the brief stated:

"The atmosphere that has surrounded this plan has been one of secrecy — a shutting out of community participation in the actual drawing up of the plan.

"We ask, therefore, how can community residents see this process other than one that has negated real participation and replaced it by the traditional rubber stamping of professionally conceived and professionally developed plans produced in the back rooms of City Hall?"

The brief complained that the community plan leaves council's options so broad that it "perpetuates the traditional 'firefighting' approach to problem solving that has always failed to place problems within a broad perspective."

While there is some validiby to the claim that all plans must be flexible, it argued, this reasoning must not be used as "an excuse to permit city council to commit itself to nothing in particular."

It claimed the city's plan will benefit downtown businessmen because it will provide them with a bigger clientele in the immediate residential areas, and it will also be a bonanza to the real estate industry.

Architect David Hambleton was one of only two speakers to support the plan as it stands.

He deplored the fact that the meeting had acquired all the trappings for the "scenario of a Shakespearean tragedy," complete with sundry villians including the city administration, realtors, developers and businessmen.

"It's time we grew up and got away from this type of confrontation meeting," he added.

No Ferries, No Mail, No Garbage Collection

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

If you want to get off Vancouver Island by ferry Thursday, forget it.

And you will almost certainly be disappointed if you are expecting mail to be delivered or your swelling garbage cans to be emptied.

It is organized labor's day of protest against federal wage guidelines and employees in these areas have voted to stay off the job.

There will be B.C. Hydro bus service in the Greater Victoria area but there will be no service up-Island as Vancouver Island Coach Lines will be out with members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers supporting the day.

B.C. Ferries will stay tied up at the terminals because 2,400 unlicensed workers are not expected to report for work.

The one-day shutdown will also get support from the 17 construction industry unions and all major forest industry mills will be down as members of the International Woodworkers of America pledged their support.

These are the areas where the support for the day is strongest but trade union leaders are a bit jittery about just how tough the show of strength will be as there are some hesitant troops.

Most of the leaders agree with reports that about 75 per cent of B.C.'s unionized work force — more than 200,000 persons — will be off the job.

But when pressed on specifics, the leaders admit that although many of the large industrial unions have committed their support there are still a number of areas where the strength is uncertain.

For example, despite a strong call from its executive to honor the day, the 35,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees Union appear to be split on the issue.

There is also a split in Victoria in the ranks of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, one of the original supporters of the Canadian Labor Congress decision to call the national strike.

Only Local 50, covering the city's outside workers, has voted to stay off the job. Other locals have decided to boycott the day or left the decision up to their members.

Police, fire and hospital services will be maintained but there may be some delays in placing long distance telephone calls through the operator or in getting telephone information.

Schools in the area should operate normally as teachers have voted to stay on the job.

Victoria union leaders are hopeful a majority of the 18,000 members of the Victoria Labor Council will turn out for a parade and rally in front of the legislative buildings at noon Thursday.

One CLC spokesman said the union leaders are "a little bit on edge" about the day, the first such national strike in Canada's history.

"We've all got butterflies," he said.

The main purpose of the day is to show the federal government that the leaders have the support of rank and file members in their attack on Ottawa's economic moves.

—controls have only served to keep wages down and have had no dampening effect on prices and household costs, such as mortgage rates, energy and food prices;

—controls have killed collective bargaining because they change the terms of agreement worked out between the two parties;

—controls represent a betrayal by PrimeMinister Trudeau who campaigned in the 1974 federal election against such eonomic restraints;

—the federal government is doing nothing to solve the problems of unemployment, lack of housing and high energy costs.

Art Kube, a CLC spokesman in Vancouver, says not only are controls not working, they are holding up any form of economic recovery.

He says he is hopeful that after Thursday Ottawa will remove the controls but added labor has already been partially successful in that it is "getting to them (the federal government) more than we have before."

ASK THE TIMES

Q. On Nov. 29, 1949, a Victoria tow boat went down off Trial Island. The only survivor was a young lad who got ashore on a log. I would like to know the name of the tow boat. J.H.

A. The tragedy occurred Nov. 26, 1949. The tug was the 74-foot George McGregor, owned by the Victoria Tug Company and named for the company's founder, the late Capt. George McGregor.

'Let's Omit Gory Details'

Saanich school board is upset over the amount of publicity the press gives vandalism at district schools.

Trustees Tuesday night complained press coverage is excessive and too detailed and tends to aggravate the problems.

Board chairman Dr. Gerry Kristianson said the incidence of vandalism seemed to rise in proportion to press coverage.

"Let's say there is vandalism at schools," vice-chairman Norma Sealey said. "But let's omit some of the gory details."

In other business, trustee Walter Tangye created a stir when he announced there was no need for the board to have sent himself, trustees Lois Walsh and Harry Tobin and superintendent Eric Lewis to a Canadian Education Association convention in Halifax last month.

"Why spend $2,000 just to provide part of an audience?" Tangye asked.

He said in light of present economic conditions it would have been enough to have had copies of reports given at the convention sent to the board members.

Even a week or so of vacation spent at home doing all those things that always seem to need doing at this time of the year, is enough to throw you off stride.

You haven't been away long enough to have forgotten where it is you sit in the newsroom. But all those days of being so delightfully out of touch have left your mind even more hazy than usual. And so by habit you stuff pieces of paper into your typewriter . . . but alas, no words appear on them.

It was in exactly that frame of mind that I leapt from my deak Tuesday afternoon to walk the streets of our fair city as it basked in yet another of the glorious Indian Summer days we have surely earned.

And I'm glad I did.

I hadn't got too far into the downtown core when I met Hannah Matilda Robinson. And I just couldn't pass her by.

Her silver hair tied back with a scarf and wearing a warm kind of coat everyone's grandmother might wear, Hannah was chewing gum and fiddling away at the entrance to Bastion Square. One blue shoe tapped neatly in time with the tune and near it her violin case lay open to collect the coins some pedestrians tossed in.

The coins, of course — she sometimes makes $2 or $3 and on rare occasions up to $10 a day — do help supplement her old-age pension. But they aren't the real reason Hannah fiddles her way around town.

She can't play as well indoors and she can't play at all sitting down, Hannah explains. And so, because she likes people to hear her music, she'll fiddle for a while in Bastion Square perhaps or, if there's already someone there, she'll stop at one of her other favorite places.

With all that standing, Hannah can only hack it for about half an hour at a time.

"Or an hour, if I don't play too hard," she says.

And so she can easily be talked into what she calls "a wake-me-up cup of coffee" in a nearby restaurant.

With a cup in one hand and a cigarette in the other, Hannah leans across the little table and confides that she's a musical rarity and that, as far as she knows, she's in her 70s.

"I came from a very large family in the Ottawa Valley and no one paid much attention as to which years we were all born," she said. "I believe I'm in my 70s but I could go for 50." Then she adds with a chuckle: "In fact, some people say I could go for 16!"

"This was a gift I was born with," Hannah says, glancing down at her violin case. "I never had any lessons. I just picked up a fiddle one day when I was about 12 and started playing it. I became quite famous around Ottawa — everyone knew me. They would come from miles around to hear me play because not many people can just pick up a violin and play it like I did."

In her younger days, Bonnie, as she was better known as then, played the violin at concerts and dances. Often farmers at dances in Ontario and later in Saskatchewan would pass the hat around while she was playing and collect anywhere from $50 to $100 for her. Now it's nickels and dimes and a few curious looks from passers-by more used to seeing the long-haired and bearded young people play their guitars on the streets here in the summer. But she doesn't mind.

In between those two extremes of life, Hannah Matilda Robinson has fiddled her way right across Canada, playing in almost every major centre and many many minor ones. When her husband died 20 years ago, she played on, and later combined with a man to play duets in cabarets and nightclubs.

"He dragged me out," Hannah explains. "I didn't always want to go but he'd say 'Come out and share your gift with other people.' "

When her partner went broke a few years ago, he was forced to sell his old violin. As Hannah's original instrument had since been smashed in a fall from a shelf, she paid him $10 for his.

"And I've been playing it ever since."

When the coffee's all gone and she's ready for a bit more standing, Hannah goes back out to her fans. Back to the Blue Skirt Waltz, to Somewhere My Love, to Springtime in the Rockies and many more, some of which she has made up herself.

What about your family, Hannah? I asked as we parted.

And grandchildren?

Catch McGeer Name of Game

Petch wanted to convince McGeer of UVic's need for more funds to continue its building program, specifically a new music wing — cost $3.2 million — for the MacLaurin Building.

So Petch invited McGeer to lunch Tuesday.

The UVic president said he spent days, drawing up plans, models flow charts and designs all geared to impress McGeer.

He wanted to show that the Universities Council which handles all financial grants to UVic, the University of B.C. and Simon Fraser wasn't really being fair.

After all, the council approved construction of the new music wing more than one-and-a-half years ago.

So where are the funds?

On the other were Petch, UVic chairman Joseph Cunliffe and buildings and finance chairman Ian Stewat.

It was a leisurely meal, said Petch, with McGeer for the most part talking about how he intends to emphasize vocational and career-oriented training facilities in the future.

The coffee arrived and Cunliffe rose to outline the manner in which the UVic presentation would be given. He'd just started when McGeer interjected.

Sorry, the minister said. He had to run. Could Cunliffe finish what he had to say in 10 minutes?

"I couldn't believe it," Petch said today. "If I'd only known beforehand. I wouldn't have sat there eating. I'd have been on the floor presenting the facts to McGeer while he dined."

McGeer gave no reason for his sudden departure but agreed to meet again with UVic officials.

When and where wasn't settled but it is doubtful it will be over lunch, one official said.

New Vote on Nov. 20 for Rec Centre

Central Saanich council voted Tuesday night to rejoin Sidney and North Saanich in building a recreation centre on the Saanich Peninsula and will seek voter approval in the Nov. 20 municipal elections.

The move comes after Central Saanich ratepayers rejected a separate recreation centre plan in a referendum last month. Earlier in September ratepayers in North Saanich and Sidney voted solidly in favor of a $1.8 million swimming pool-rink, to be built on the East Saanich Road south of McTavish.

Meanwhile, a split has appeared in the teamwork between Sidney and North Saanich mayors, who led their councils into developing and selling the centre project to ratepayers after Central Saanich opted out of the partnership earlier this year, arguing plans were too costly.

Mayor Jean Butler of Central Saanich said today her council would not have left the so-called tri-municipal project if the cost had been the present $1.8 million rather than the $3.8 million initially proposed.

She said her council had offered what it considered a responsible plan last month but voters said no, some because they wanted no increase in property taxes and others because they wanted Central Saanich in on a tri-municipal partnership.

As part of municipal election balloting, Central Saanich ratepayers will be asked if they favor joining the Sidney and North Saanich centre plan as it now stands, sharing the cost and use of the centre.

Mrs. Butler said the projected costs of joining have yet to be worked out in detail but they will be about the same as they would have been for the separate Central Saanich centre, that is, about a .6 per cent increase on the property tax bill.

The Capital Region Board will be asked later today to approve the Central Saanich re-entry. The board is handling the organizing of the project for Sidney and North Saanich.

The Sidney-North Saanich referendum was made contingent on the provincial government contributing a one-third grant, about $600,000, and Recreation Minister Grace McCarthy has since indicated there are no more funds available for recreation projects this year.

Without a grant Sidney and North Saanich have voter approval to spend only $1,240,000 and the split which has developed between their mayors concerns how quickly the project should be started and how much should be built.

Mayor Paul Grieve of North Saanich said today he doesn't think the project will get any grant but it would be $300,000 at most.

A stripped-down version of the recreation centre, with pool and rink functioning but other parts just roughed in, would drop the cost to $1,380,000 and North Saanich has asked the municipal affairs department if it would approve going ahead with that.

His council will meet Thursday morning to consider approving an immediate start on such a bare-bones centre.

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said today McCarthy should be given a chance to answer a plea both mayors made to her last week. The contract price on the centre is good to the end of November.

Irked at the moves North Saanich has made on its own, Malcolm said it appears the stripped-down centre would give ratepayers less while they paid more.

If one were to look at all four hands in today's deal, he would find it difficult to conceive how South managed to avoid losing two trump tricks at his six-heart contract. But he did so, and the defenders could not have done a thing about it. Sitting South was the late Mike Michaels ,of Washington, D.C. ♣

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Hardly any bridge player with a dram of sporting blood would fail to catch slam fever after his partner's raise. Michaels was no exception. When his Blackwood inquiry brought forth a two-ace response, the slam in hearts was bid with dispatch and enthusiasm.

A brief survey of the dummy disclosed a sure diamond loser, so declarer turned his attention to the trump suit. Either a 2-2 division or the queen of trumps in the East hand would result in victory — provided declarer guessed correctly. However, if West had the four outstanding trumps (a highly unlikely possibility), the contract would be in dire jeopardy. So Michaels, in approaching the play, made the pessimistic assumption that West had the missing trumps. His pessimism paid a nice dividend.

The spade queen was taken by the ace, and a club to dummy was followed by the ruffing of a club. South now played a trump to the board's ace, West putting up the nine. When East turned out to be "heartless," declarer's ruffing of a club at trick three was well founded. A third club lead was then ruffed in the closed hand, and after the spade king was cashed, South's remaining spade was ruffed with dummy's next-to-last trump.

A third club ruff reduced declarer to the doubleton K-J of trumps as West helplessly followed suit in clubs. Next came the ace and king of diamonds, and then the nine of diamonds was played to trick 11. West, with the Q-10-4 of trumps remaining, had no option but to ruff.

West now had to lead away from his Q-10 of trumps into South's K-J, enabling South to win the last two tricks.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast
Thursday, October 14

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on happier home life, more security, greater cash flow. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. You get news from afar and it causes you to "Go off your diet." Communicate — get thoughts, concepts, ideas on paper!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ideas are plentiful; key is to be selective. Choose quality, stick with those who are energetic, sincere, dedicated. Eschew super-salesmen types. Accent on relatives, calls, short trips, the locating of lost objects.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Change, variety, perception, travel and love could combine. Virgo, Sagittarius and another Gemini dominate scenario. Be aware of costs, time, motion, getting the most of your efforts and money. Count your change!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look beyond the immediate; detect hints, subtle signals. Check behind the scenes. Hospital visit, temporary confinement or theatrical production could be on agenda. Separate illusion from fact. Pisces, Virgo could figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Co-operate with Leo. Accent on friends, hopes, wishes, profit that can accrue from business venture. Organize priorities. Get what you need by having a definite format or program. Emotional responses tend to dominate logic. Ride with tide!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on standing tall, stick by principles, accepting civic duty, running for office, getting rid of albatross around your neck. Need is to streamline, to shake off the superfluous. More persons are attentive — and expect more of you. You're up to it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good moon aspect coincides now with creativity, intensified relationship, significant changes, the imprinting of your own style. Welcome chance for added independence, fresh contacts, chance to love and be loved. It can happen!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Nothing is slick, smooth and without obligation. Know it and act is if you are aware of it. Applies especially to property, children, family, emotional situation. If immature, you call it "sticky." Otherwise, it is necessary and no cause for panic. What do you choose?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on public relations, partnership, law, permanent ties, marital status. Go slow; let others take initiative. Be a good listener, a shrewd observer. Forces tend to be scattered — leave fine points, details for another, more stable time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Practical affairs should be handled in steady, thorough manner. Don't rush to judgment or throw out health rules. Another Aquarian, or Leo, a Scorpio could figure in scenario. Refuse to be pushed aside by one who is better at talking than performing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your sensitivity surfaces; feelings dominate. If single, you love — madly. If married, you rediscover mate. Married or single, you have better rapport with children. You make significant changes — you get rid of deadwood. You're moving and going places!

IF OCTOBER 14th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are perceptive, vital, have healthy curiosity, are attractive to opposite sex — you have unique way of expressing yourself and you could report, teach, write and you are fascinated with music. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. Emotional setback occurred this year but healing process is underway. You begin socializing to greater extent this month. You'll do more traveling in 1977.

"I got the things you wanted for the kids' camp kit," said Don. "A cheap knife, a fork, a spoon, and a plate. Four of each and twelve bucks the lot."

Susan nodded. "That was cheap. How were they priced?"

Don thought a moment. "Five spoons would be the same as a knife and a fork, a spoon and a fork the same as a knife," he replied. "and one plate the same as a knife and a spoon."

What were the prices?

Thanks for idea to Susan Baker, Norwich, England.
